Pacific Meadows' dining room to close next month

By SUSAN BECK

THE PINK Rose Cafe, the main dining room at Pacific Meadows in Carmel Valley, will close permanently Nov. 15.

Steve Garner, senior vice president of American Baptist Homes of the West (ABHOW), corporate managers of Pacific Meadows, made the announcement in the 200-unit, retirement community's dining room, at a Resident/Management Workshop Tuesday, Oct. 5.

"The decision is simply based on the numbers," said Garner. "I hope, right along with all of you, that some day we can turn it around and open the dining room up again. As it is now, we are losing about $8,000 a month."

Garner said the entire operation at Pacific Meadows is in financial turmoil. The projected budget for 1992-93 fell short by more than $200,000.

"The decision is simply based on the numbers. I hope, right along with all of you, that some day we can turn it around and open the dining room up again. As it is now, we are losing about $8,000 a month."

— Steve Garner

Garner attributed one of the main reasons for the loss of revenue to ABHOW's decision to not rent available apartments until a mandatory recertification of resident incomes is completed.

Margaret Weitkamp, a consultant for the California Housing Partnership Corp., was hired to assist Pacific Meadows administrative staff with the recertification.

The annual certification, which dictates four rent categories for the low-to-moderate income range, is complicated, said Weitkamp.

She added the complexities stem from the myriad of rules and regulations stipulated by the several federal, state and county agencies that fund the facility.

Also, she added, there are restrictions based on private investors' ability to receive tax credits through the Federal Low-Income Housing Tax Credit Program. Private investments contributed to about half of the $17 million it cost to build Pacific Meadows.

For private investors to receive tax credits, each of the building units at Pacific Meadows must have a mix of incomes, said Weitkamp. "It gets very complicated and the 'strings' are always changing."

Part of the funding restrictions prohibit any addi-

Petaluma kidnapping hits home

Carmel grandparents face horror of 12-year-old's abduction

By JOHN DETRO

THEIR GRANDDAUGHTER was stolen at knifepoint from her modest home in Petaluma by a bearded male stranger. And so, as the search for 12-year-old Polly Hannah Klaas went national via television and drew FBI agents by the dozens, two local couples sought to express terror and love of unsayable size.

Speaking on breaks from the widespread hunt were Joe and Betty Jane Klaas of Carmel (parents of Polly's father, Marc Klaas) along with Eugene and Joan Reed from Pebble Beach (parents of Eve Nichol, the youngster's mother).

Writer Joe was a World War II fighter pilot who spent 25 months in a Nazi prison camp. Speaking from the Polly Klaas Search and Rescue Control Center in downtown Petaluma, he said: "This situation with little Polly is the worst experience of my life. There's horror here — just like war. We've got to keep fighting. My God, she's such a bright and lovely child. Now there are between 30-40 FBI agents on the scene. There were so many volunteer

'Ambiguous, controversial'

CUSD candidates slam questionnaires

By SCOTT BREARTON

CANDIDATES FOR the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education have denounced questionnaires recently distributed by two local political action groups, uniformly characterizing them as "ambiguous and controversial."

Last month, Ray Burch, Nancy Dice, Jim Kistenmacher and Annette Yee Steck — all campaigning for a two-year seat on the board — received two questionnaires, one from Planned Parenthood Action League and the other from the Christian Coalition of Monterey County.

It appears a battle is heating up between those who support "traditional family values" and those who favor "family planning" and access to contraception.

Each of the candidates, regardless of their differences, agreed the questions revealed clear bias and an attempt to elicit certain answers.

"There are a lot of things the school board does have control over — things that parents don't even know about," said Karen Murphy, chairman of the Christian Coalition.

City approves taping of 'Good Morning America'

By PAUL WOLF

DESPITE THE street closures and the potential for some early morning noise, the Carmel City Council members, residents and business people have laid out the red carpet for cast and crew of Good Morning America.

Voting unanimously and enthusiastically Tuesday, Oct. 5, the five-member council approved a request by ABC to tape the show in the village on Sunday, Nov. 7, and Monday, Nov. 8 — for airing Tuesday, Nov. 9.

The program is generally live from New York, except when on the road. Carmel is the second stop on a week-long California tour.

Monday will be the big day. The filming will be carried out before a live audience on a platform stage at the Carmel Beach parking area.

(About 200 tickets are being made available. They can be obtained by contacting the Carmel Business Association.)

The production crew will begin setting up as early as 3 a.m., putting generators and lighting on line. ABC production executives, who are working closely with the CBA, promise to keep noise at a minimum.

Three ABC executives appeared before the council. They promised to present a "balanced" picture of Carmel, including a variety of features and profiles, as well as interviews with such Carmel-based celebrities as Clint Eastwood and Doris Day.

Other actions

In other matters, the council:

- Approved City Administrator Jere Kersnar's list of priorities for the new city code enforcement procedures.

Moreover, the council agreed to make Fire Chief Bill Hill code-enforcement "coordinator," making related activities the responsibility of his department.

For over a year, the city has gotten by without a code-compliance officer — a casualty of budget cuts. Enforcement,

WITH 78 years of history, The Carmel Pine Cone is continually noting its landmarks.

And, this week, we note the first appearance of a four-color photograph — appropriately featured on the newspaper's recently instituted sports page, at the front of Section 2.

"This is just another step in the direction of giving the paper a more modern look," said Pine Cone General Manager Karen Carlson. "We intend to use color photos as often as possible."

Tradition: Henry Bruce quaffs first beer at 'new' Red Lion Tavern

By SUSAN BECK

IN KEEPING with tradition, Henry Clark Bruce was invited to buy the first beer at the official opening of the new Red Lion Tavern on Friday, Oct. 1.

The last time Bruce was invited to an opening was in 1984, when Bud Allen called on his friend to buy the first beer at his new restaurant, Bud's Pub, on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth street in Carmel, where the Red Lion is now located.

The tradition started on Sept. 28, 1964, when another of Bruce's friends, Don Turner, opened the original Red Lion Tavern on San Carlos street in the Carmel Square. Bruce was one of the tavern's first customers.

And thereafter, every day after work, Bruce would spend a few hours at the tavern visiting with friends, drinking beer and relaxing.

"They reserved a bar stool for me," said Bruce. "Two stools from the wall. It was reserved for me between 4 and 6 p.m. everyday."

At the tavern, Bruce met his favorite bartender, Jack Sevier, who started working at the Red Lion in 1976.

New location celebration

THE RED Lion Tavern will hold a grand reopening celebration from noon to 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 10, starting at its new location — the former site of Bud's Pub on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth streets in Carmel.

A parade featuring the Highland Bagpipers will begin at 4 p.m. at Ron's Liquors on San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh streets with ceremonial installation of the Scottish Caber at 5 p.m. in the new Red Lion.

Rhythm and Rough will play 1930s and '40s music from 6 to 8 p.m. and the Nick Williams Blues and Jazz Trio will perform from 8 to 10 p.m.

The original site of the first Red Lion Tavern was on San Carlos Street in the Carmel Square.

Additional information is available by calling 625-6765.

Sevier recalls affectionately how he always thought he was on a first-name basis with his quiet, shy customer. "Everyone calls him Bruce. I knew him five years before I realized Bruce was his last name."

Familiar face

Bruce, a familiar face around town, arrived in Carmel in January 1930. After being discharged from his four years of service with the U. S. Navy, he traveled immediately to the Monterey Peninsula because he had a job waiting for him in Carmel.

A friend Bruce met in the service had a printing position waiting for him with The Carmel Pine Cone.

Bruce had two years experience as a typesetting apprentice for a newspaper back home in Illinois, where his father was the undertaker and also owned a furniture store.

"I couldn't believe my eyes," said Bruce, the first time he saw the little village by the sea. He has lived in the city ever since.

Bruce worked at The Pine Cone for six years during the time Perry Newberry, Robert Allen Griffin and Hal Garrott were publishers. His first wife, Georgia, also worked for The Pine Cone as a bookkeeper.

Post Office task force to unveil improvement plans

OPTION 1A IS the most ambitious of the three proposals for improving the Carmel Post Office public area. It includes, for starters, widening the sidewalk by seven feet and building a 22-inch high brick wall with extensive landscaping. The cost is estimated at $25,000.

■ Tuesday meeting will focus on three projects

By PAUL WOLF

RESIDENTS AND business people will have the chance to speak their minds on three distinct plans for improving the public area next to the Carmel Post Office.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 12, at the Vista Lobos meeting room, the Post Office Improvement Task Force will draw public comment on whether any of the three plans has merit and should be pursued by the city.

The task force will hear from the public, then write a report and turn the matter over to the Carmel Planning Commission.

Each of the three projects includes, for starters, sidewalk widening, improvements to the building's facade and a number of pedestrian comfort and safety measures.

While the task force officially places the costs as somewhere between $10,000 and $25,000, one member, restaurateur

Eddie Johnson, believes a more realistic figure may be in the neighborhood of $50,000 to $60,000.

"I do not feel that one public information session is enough," added Johnson, who suggested the city may have chosen "the wrong time" to spend money on such a project.

The task force was established by Mayor Ken White to determine whether there was enough public support for the improvements.

Starting over

The task force, in effect, has modified the ambitions of the Carmel 2016 Committee, which earlier this year envisioned more extensive plans — all to mixed public response.

There were concerns raised from every level — regarding impacts to parking, traffic and commerce.

"We pretty much started all over again," said Steve Brooks, task force co-

RLS dedicates new $3.5 million residence hall

■ Day family serves as impetus behind school's coed dormitory

MORE THAN 80 supporters of Robert Louis Stevenson turned out to participate in dedication ceremonies of the Pebble Beach school's new $3.5 million coeducational dormitory.

The Willametta K. Day Residence Hall, which provides housing for 58 students and four faculty families, was dedicated Friday, Sept. 24 in a ceremony presided over by RLS Headmaster Joe Wandke.

Wandke praised the individuals and businesses whose significant donations made Day Hall a reality. The hall is named in memory of Mrs. Day, an ardent supporter of the school and former longtime member of the board of trustees.

Mrs. Day's three sons — Robert, Matthew and T.J. — returned to their alma mater for the occasion. Wandke presented the three men with framed color photos of the new building in appreciation of the Days' ongoing financial contributions to RLS.

"Without these three gentlemen," Wandke said, "we wouldn't be here this evening."

Robert Day, a 1961 graduate of Stevenson, announced at the ceremonies that his family would be contributing an additional $500,000 earmarked for the completion phase of the dormitory project. When finished, the additional wing will house 21 more students.

Another graduate of RLS — Mark Hornberger (class of '68) — served as architect of the new residence hall. Hornberger, whose firm is based in San Francisco, was taken by surprise when Wandke announced that one of the "houses" in Day Hall will be named "Hornberger House." The hall's two other houses were named in memory of Carolyn K. Hotchkis and actress Jean Arthur.

Wandke said a quadrangle in Day Hall will be jointly named in honor of five donors: Davis J. Factor, Jr. of Carmel, who is the incoming president of the school's board of trustees; Dr. and Mrs. Gerald B. Martin; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Orradre of San Ardo; Mr. and Mrs. James B. Araujo of Santa Barbara; and Dr. and Mrs. F. Wayne Paullus of Amarillo, Texas.

Others saluted by Wandke for their contributions to the new residence hall included: Tom and Sherrie McCullough of Carmel; George and Patty Walker of Carmel; Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hayward of Carmel Valley; and Webcor Builders, Inc. of Pebble Beach.

Day Hall, which encompasses 22,000 square feet, was officially opened to students on Sept. 9.

PRIOR TO the start of dedication ceremonies on Sept. 24, Robert Louis Stevenson supporters gathered outside the new Willametta K. Day Residence Hall.

BILL KECK, Carmel Valley's John Gardiner and T.J. Day reminisced outside the Common Room before dedication ceremonies.

ROBERT DAY, a Stevenson graduate, told the crowd that his family would be donating an additional $500,000 for Phase II of Day Hall. Mark Hornberger, RLS graduate and project architect, and RLS Headmaster Joe Wandke (right) listen from the front row.

Council agrees to protect imperiled rec program

By PAUL WOLF

MAKING A secure home for the Carmel Recreation Department, which has been on the "endangered departments list" for the past two years, was given a top-priority status by the Carmel City Council.

Meeting in a special Saturday retreat Oct. 2, the council also deemed the renovation of Sunset Center and developing a five-year capital improvement plan major priorities for the coming 18-months.

The listing of priorities was a major portion of the special meeting, which allowed Mayor Ken White and the four other council members an opportunity to brainstorm and plan for the near-term future.

The formulation of goals was facilitated by Bob Murray, a Sacramento-based consultant.

The recreation department was twice proposed for elimination, in both 1992-93 and 1993-94 fiscal year budgets, but each time was saved by a city council responding great public outcry.

Council members Saturday agreed unanimously that the department should not have to endure an uncomfortable one-foot-in, one-foot-out position. The recreation department has been understaffed, and its home — the Vista Lobos facility — is considered inadequate.

The council also listed upgrading the Vista Lobos community meeting room as a priority, as well as developing a recognition program for city staff, perhaps but not necessarily to include pay raises.

In addition, members resolved to start a program for better conveying information about city business to Carmel residents — both in the form of a regularly circulated newsletter and a "newcomers' guide" to zoning and building rules.

Other priorities were agreed to by majority, rather than unanimous, vote include:

- Improving emergency response communications, particularly the procedures associated with 9-1-1, a system hampered by Carmel's lack of numbered addresses.

- Defining the legal status of T-shirt sales, and what constitutes a T-shirt, as distinguished from the definition of a "souvenir."

- Developing a program for downtown sidewalk cleaning.

- Determining the appropriate use of the First Murphy House.

- Make physical improvements to the public area next to the Carmel Post Office.

- Establish a program of joint meetings with city commissions and committees.

The council will meet again in a special session Nov.

9. But, with a full agenda that day, it is unlikely members will spend much time discussing the goals, according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

In time, the city staff will provide reports on the feasibility and cost of meeting each of the goals.

The 'vision thing' is disguise for classic political debate

■ Analysis: Livingston's hopes for a visionary mayor and city council were seen by colleagues as strike against differing views.

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL CITY Council members fought for nothing less than "the soul of Carmel." But, at a Saturday retreat Oct. 2, held at Sunset Center, that precious thing meant different things to different people.

There may be only so many classic political debates, but they come in a myriad of disguises. Here, the discussion about long-range planning merely revealed the conflicting goals of the individual and community.

It began with Councilwoman Barbara Livingston's insistence that she and her colleagues should devise some statements of purpose regarding the council's role as "future thinkers."

"I feel we aren't working well together," she told the four other council members. "I think we have to recognize (formally) that every seemingly insignificant decision we make now has unforeseen, long-range consequences for the future," she added.

Community-mindedness

Foremost in Livingston's mind was the preservation of the urban forest, village ambiance, quiet streets and the subordination of business to residential interests.

She was hoping for some kind of "commitment" from the others regarding "the ideals that people in Carmel have fought for from the beginning."

"I find this vision thing really disturbing," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "I don't want to build a Carmel that is perfect in every little way but forgets its soul — its individual people."

The subtext within Fischer's comments was that an overdetailed prescription for Carmel's future would squelch the rights of individuals both in business and on private property.

Similarly, Mayor Ken White and Councilman Phil Coniglio were uncomfortable with Livingston's plea. Coniglio said that he "takes the future into consideration" as a matter of course, "even though my vote may not agree with yours. We may have a different idea about what is good for the future."

Avoiding a trap?

White was concerned about falling into some kind of trap. "I could see where you'd have the mayor not agreeing with a certain council member, and then that council member saying, 'Oh, clearly the mayor is not a future thinker.' I don't like that."

Since he took office in April of 1992, White has often been the swing vote on council actions that have left Coniglio and Fischer on one side and Livingston and Councilwoman Barbara Brooks on the other.

In the end, everyone agreed that future impacts are an important factor in the council's decision-making, and no one wished to sell out the soul of Carmel.

The real question was, Should this notion be formulated into policy? Even in this informal setting, White was again the tie-breaker.

Livingston didn't expect her request would be blocked by politics, but that is exactly what happened.

admit city officials, has been lax. "All of a sudden, I feel we are getting back on our feet again and moving," commented Councilman Bob Fischer.

Kersnar's plan creates an objective set of priorities to determine how fast potential violations will be investigated.

The city administrator's plan includes an outside time limit for how long it should take to investigate a potential violation and make an "initial determination" whether a breach exists.

Here is the time line he presented for the different kinds of transgressions: Health and safety — "immediate" response and determination; land use — two weeks; design — three weeks; other possible violations — four weeks.

• Took unanimous action to make illegal tree pruning or tree removal a misdemeanor, rather than an infraction.

the lesser penalty — with its maximum fine of $100 — has amounted to "a slap on the wrist." The new penalty carries with it a fine up to $1,000 and six months in jail. The city can also seek restitution for the loss of a natural resource, according to City Attorney Don Freeman.

Carmel to corporations: We're in charge

By PAUL WOLF

THE CARMEL City Council's seemingly minor action on a request for new signs was turned into a statement of a significant sort.

It goes like this: Major corporations are welcome to do business in the village, but they must play by Carmel's rules.

On Tuesday, Oct. 5, the council unanimously denied an appeal by Bank of America. The Carmel branch was challenging a planning commission decision to reject five new signs at the corner of Mission Street and 7th Avenue.

One bank official said the signs were needed, particularly to direct customers to the somewhat obscured ATMs. "We are trying to provide the same level of service at all of our branches," said District Manager Sue Grilla.

The planning commission considered the signs "excessive." The council agreed.

"I had the sense from this request that the world bank corporation was asking us to conform to their standards," declared Ken White. "But we will ask corporations to conform to village standards."

White noted that, despite differences among council members, there is fundamental agreement about basic principles: "We don't want to be like the rest of the world, and some people still don't get it. Here, the world has to conform to us."

"This is the first time in ABHOWs

Garner.

He pointed out the administrative

Administrator Charleen Dean said ever since the dining room opened in

"Since Day One we've picked up the

Two-hour documentary on Carmel scheduled to premiere January '94

■ Film, featuring Clint Eastwood as host, was supposed to be ready for viewing this month, but production delays will require 1994 release.

By PAUL WOLF

BOILING DOWN more than 200 years of Carmel history into less than two hours is not a task to be rushed.

The premiere of Don't Pave Main Street, the working title for the feature-length documentary boasting Clint Eastwood as "host-on-camera," will be delayed by about three months.

As recently as last month, Carmel Heritage was expecting an October premiere, but now January appears more reasonable, according to Jim Moore, a Carmel resident who coordinated production.

"It just takes time to get all the bits and pieces together," Moore said. "Naturally, we wanted a quality product. It wasn't any one thing that has put us behind."

"I am really excited about this — absolutely," Moore said. "I am going to be very surprised if this is not an award-winning piece."

Carmel Heritage hopes to hold the premiere at the main theater at Sunset Center, although no specific time and place have yet been secured, according to Moore.

Philo Holland, who sits on the Carmel Heritage board, said there is a chance the premiere could take place "as early as December or as late as February...depending on when the community feels it can do this."

Last spring, the documentary — chronicling Carmel from the Ohlones Indians to the shaping of the village in the 1920s and 1930s — was expected to be as brief as one hour. But apparently there is much history to squeeze into a short space of time, and the finished product will run two hours or nearly that long, Moore said.

The film draws on diverse talents.

Eastwood, Carmel's former mayor and a man with no shortage of more lucrative filmmaking opportunities, donated his time out of love for the town, as he explained in April.

Acclaimed jazz composer David Benoit wrote the soundtrack. Local actors have supplied the voiceovers. Eastwood provided some of his connections and studio resources, although he did not donate funds — which were private sources totalling some $200,000.

Last April, many locals and visitors may have spotted actor and crew standing on a commercial building rooftop at Ocean and Dolores, and then atop Hawk Tower of the Tor House.

It is anticipated, according to Moore, that copies of the video will go on sale some time early next year. But Carmel Heritage has not determined how many, where and for what price. "None of this is known at this point," Moore said. "All we know is this is a piece that will be available to locals, but we are trying to determine different avenues of distribution."

Proposed drug policy misses the point

ALTHOUGH THE newly proposed Carmel Unified School District drug policy appears to be laden with good intentions, many Carmel High students would argue that while parts of the plan are a vast improvement over the existing policy, other parts are totally unacceptable.

A little background is necessary: Under the current policy, if a student is caught using or in possession of drugs, they are suspended for five days and immediately taken out of any of their extracurricular activities, including sports. Students must complete a drug rehabilitation program in order to return to school. Self-referral is not punishable under the old policy.

The new policy would give only a two-week suspension from extracurricular activities for the first offense, and a 90-day suspension for the second. In most cases, the 90-day suspension would keep the youth out of the sport or activity in which they were participating and, in the case of sports, they would miss a significant part of the next sports season as well.

The new policy would not punish in cases of self-referral for the first offense. A second self-referral, however, would result in a two-week extracurricular activity suspension.

Controversy arises

The most controversial part of the new policy involves the signing of a 24-hour non-use contract by students. Each student planning to participate in any extracurricular activity would have to sign a contract stating they would not use any drugs or alcohol at any time, including nights and weekends.

After reviewing the old policy, which is vague, it is obvious that a new policy is needed. That the new policy encourages self-referral and gives only a two-week suspension as opposed to being kicked out of an activity entirely is positive, but the new policy does have serious defects.

For starters, if a student is accused of using or possessing drugs or alcohol, and denies the charge, the policy mentions an advisory panel would determine the validity of the allegations. Nowhere in the policy is any mention of who would be on the advisory panel, or whether or not the student would be able to appeal any decisions made by the panel.

The other major flaw in the new policy lies in the non-use contract. While the idea behind it is noble, it is neither feasible nor appropriate. As many students made clear at a forum on Thursday, Sept. 30 during lunch in the CHS library, the non-use contract is not going to solve the problem — it will only complicate it.

The contract states only the illegal use of drugs and alcohol are against the policy. This would not include the consumption of alcohol on private property, which is legal for minors in California provided they have parental consent. Yet despite the language of the proposed policy, CHS principal Marie Ishida said that it is her intent to discourage this kind of activity.

I have no problem with discouraging the use of drugs and alcohol by minors. I don't use them myself, and I don't feel that anyone else needs to either. But that is my opinion. And if one's parents want to let youths drink in their home, that is their right, even if I don't agree with it.

Is it really the place of the district, a public institution, to make the judgment that this legal activity is wrong and condemn it? What's next? What a student does on his or her own time, provided it is a legal activity, should be the choice of that student, and to some degree his or her parents.

Let's just assume for a moment the school board adopts a policy that punishes students for legal activities. Does anyone really believe that signing a piece of paper is going to change kids' minds? If students are signing the non-use contract solely because they want to participate in a particular activity, what has been achieved?

Forcing students to not use drugs won't convince them drugs are wrong — they have to believe it. For most students, it won't matter that using drugs isn't right, it will only be "wrong" if they get caught.

Policy proponents argue students who wish to participate in extracurricular activities should serve as role models for other students. If role models are the real concern, why don't we have our parents, teachers, coaches and activity advisors sign a non-use contract as well? How can anyone expect student leaders to act as role models for each other, when our role models don't live up to the standards set for us?

While it is admirable the district is concerned for the welfare of students, it should remember its role is to educate, not to make judgments or punish students for what they choose to do on their own time.

I join those students who are supportive of programs that educate about the adverse effects of drugs and alcohol. Instead of focusing on how to punish students after the fact, why not work harder to prevent the drug problem before it starts?

Egg-citing news

RECENTLY, THE Humane Society of the United States launched a consumer education campaign emphasizing the importance of using eggs from uncaged hens. I'm happy to report that the results have been impressive and many large supermarket chains now stock these eggs.

Although 70 Safeway stores carry uncaged eggs, I don't know if any stores on the Monterey Peninsula have joined the bandwagon. I do know that Albertson's carries them and since I have readers interested in buying eggs from humanely-raised hens, I would enjoy hearing from markets that offer them.

Introducing Ariel Graham

As promised, here is a picture of Ariel, the three-legged Wonder Dog, with her wonderful new family, Charlotte Graham and Bruiser, a golden retriever-rottweiler mix. Charlotte reports that all is well and Ariel is settled into her new home and routine. Our thanks to all who called to express concern for Ariel, and especially to Charlotte for giving her a chance.

The eyes have it

Have you looked into your pet's eyes lately? If not, you should! It's important to spot potential problems before they become serious. Watch for — and report to your veterinarian — any tearing, discoloration of the eyes, cuts and lacerations. If the lenses are opaque, your pet may have cataracts which can cause partial or total blindness if not treated.

Disturbing facts

- Between eight million and 10 million animals were euthanized in America's 5,000 animal shelters last year.

- Fewer than 10 percent of shelter animals are wearing any sort of identification.

- One-third of dogs in shelters are purebreds.

- Because of lack of space and the risk of disease, shelters usually hold animals only 72 hours before euthanizing them.

- In just six years, one female dog and her offspring can produce 67,000 animals.

So do your part, my friends. Spay or neuter your pets. Be certain they have proper ID. And be a responsible pet owner. Pets are friends for life!

Questionnaires in question

While the intentions of the respective organizations seems honorable—to educate voters about the candidates' views—their method of garnering a response has come under fire.

"I think somebody is obviously interested in seeing what our viewpoints are," Kistenmacher said. "They may be searching for radicals."

In a cover letter accompanying the Christian Coalition questionnaire, Murphy wrote, "Historically, many candidates who did not respond to questionnaires had views which they expected to be unacceptable to the audience anticipated. Please do not risk misunderstandings regarding your positions."

The tone of Murphy's letter was criticized by prospective board members, as were questions contained in the questionnaire. The candidates concurred that many of the questions warranted an explanation and could not be answered in the yes or no format provided.

'Somewhat threatening'

"I consider their letter somewhat threatening," commented Burch.

"I tried very hard to not make it threatening," Murphy retorted. "We just didn't want anybody to be misconstrued by not responding."

"We're just doing a public service. No matter which way they answer the questions, it's still going to be up to the voters to make up their own minds."

Murphy said the Christian Coalition of Monterey County does not intend to campaign for or against any candidate, but would publish the candidates' responses in an upcoming newsletter.

Here are some of the questions contained in the Christian Coalition questionnaire:

- Do you support mandatory comprehensive sex education in classes for elementary school children?

- Do you support the distribution of condoms by the schools?

- Are you in favor of teaching morality and ethics in the classroom based on traditional family values rather than situational ethics?

- Are you in favor of teaching "alternative lifestyles" (i.e. homosexuality) in our schools?

And the Planned Parenthood questionnaire, which was distributed county-wide, was clearly an attempt to gather the opposing viewpoint. It also targeted sensitive issues:

- Do you support a woman's right to manage her fertility by using contraception? (or by choosing to terminate a pregnancy?)

- Do you support a minor's access to the following services without requiring her to notify or receive the consent of her parent(s): contraceptive services? abortion?

According to Holly White, associate board member of the Planned Parenthood Action League, the purpose of the survey was "to see where the candidates stand in terms of reality-based sex education."

Extremist agenda?

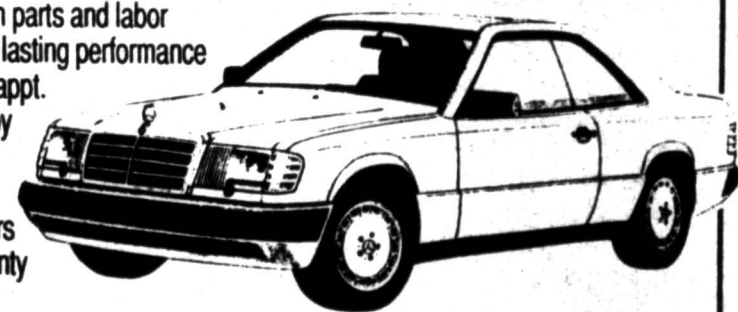

White said that while the candidates' responses would not be published due to

Prime Time

By SHIRLEY KOPLOY

A model establishment

WHERE DO older members of the community turn for help with problems of illness, housing, food, or just coping with everyday life? How do they deal with the need for companionship and recreation or handle feelings of loneliness and even despair?

Some look to friends and family and a number of excellent agencies in Monterey county, such as the Alliance on Aging and the Area Agency on Aging, for answers. For many of the 3,900 members of The Carmel foundation, it is that organization upon which they often call.

"Elizabeth" had been a member of the 43-year-old Foundation for many years. In her early 80s, she found herself faced with major surgery and no family in the immediate area.

She called upon Evelyn Vitarisi, coordinator of Support Services, who made arrangements in concert with the family for Elizabeth's admission to a convalescent hospital. Upon discharge, the recovering patient was assisted in obtaining a home health agency for intermittent care, plus 'round-the-clock and, later, part-time help at home. Vitarisi, her assistant Catherine Fanoie, and volunteers made visits at all stages of the illness and recovery.

Today, Elizabeth is out and about and living independently, utilizing Lifeline service in the event of an emergency. She is a strong foundation supporter.*

Support Services offer consultation and limited counseling in-house and in the field; referrals for in-home supportive services; weekend meal delivery; loan of medical equipment; check-writing; Medicare, MediCal and SSI information; assistance with Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care forms; seminars; workshops; support groups; and more.

Members are also connected with outside agencies to meet a variety of needs and this department also oversees the housing program.

Affordable housing

From its inception, the Foundation has had as one of its goals to provide comfortable, affordable housing for its members. Today, it has 45 apartments in three Central Carmel locations, keeps close track of residents and helps to meet many of their needs.

Applicants must be a member for one year, meet assets and income criteria and be at least 65 years of age (disabled, age 62). Residency for Haseltine and Trevvet Courts are two consecutive years in the past ten in the Grater Carmel area and for Norton Court, three consecutive years in the past ten in Carmel-by-the-Sea village. Estimated waiting time is from a month or two to two years, depending on requirements. No pets are allowed and smoking is not permitted in Norton Court. Income categories are very low, low, and, added quite recently, a new category of moderate.

The lunch bunch

At the Foundation's Diment Hall during lunch a member was heard to observe, "Where would we be without this?" She spoke of the quality of the food, the low cost, the music, the opportunity for lively discussions and companionship. The four-day-a-week lunch program is managed by Claude and Elizabeth Larson, currently via their catering service, The Village Kitchen. Like all other major CF programs, the lunch is subsidized and is for members only (with guest privileges).

Volunteer and Member Services, coordinated by Margaret Hollenbeck, steers the dining room, volunteer program (some 200 people), transportation, open houses, annual revue, member orientation,

Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners, and other activities.

One-day bus tours

One of the most lauded programs is Tour Services, Jane Holmes, coordinator. Trips include opera, ballet, musicals and museums. Some tours are quickly sold out, but getting on the waiting list is always a good bet. Upcoming fall and holiday trips will include outstanding theater and Christmas tours, including a mid-December San Francisco Express to view holiday decorations.

Additional programs include a monthly newsletter edited by the executive director and Ellen Castle; needle craft, garden, theater and discussion groups; classes; a library; art shows; and games such as bingo and bridge. The Wednesday afternoon lecture, chaired by Violet Beahan, is a tradition, and Saturday's open house includes moves and popcorn and ballroom dancing twice monthly.

It has been said that this is a group that "runs on its stomach." We only know that it is very high on tea. Tea (and coffee) is served on Sunday, Wednesday and special occasions. Even the "crafty ladies," as the craft group is known, serve a special tea at their weekly meetings.

Members may make use of a telephone, dark-rooms, a copy machine and typewriter. They can attend special programs and classes or simply "hand out."

A smooth ship

The seating and serving of some 145 members at lunch within a period of one hour is a shining example of efficiency, even though the dining room is running at near capacity. When one walks in any door of the buildings of the Foundation and observes staff spending its time productively and members happily involved in activities or conversation, it speaks of good management.

John Freitas, executive director since 1986, believes that the smooth running of The Carmel Foundation can be credited to the volunteers, the Board of Directors, Richard Walbert, president, and staff members. "...all thinking and going in the same direction... Volunteers are a key component of the entire organization and have been since day one." But one gets the feeling that Freitas sets the tone.

While there are undoubtedly other senior centers locally and nationwide, privately or government funded, that can be called model establishments, The Carmel foundation is probably unique in all the services it provides.

Sure, as do other organizations, The Carmel foundation has its problems and members raising questions from time to time. But as a member for more than two years and from feedback from many "satisfied customers," this writer is of the opinion that the problems are at a minimum. And although every effort is made, sometimes it takes a while for a new member to settle in.

Funding

Members take pride in saying, "Everything is privately funded, without government funds." This puts the Foundation in a very independent role in terms of restrictions, regulations and other pressures that can come from funding sources.

Financial support comes primarily from memorials and donations, which during the last fiscal year

"It is up to us—this generation of 55 and beyond—to demonstrate to those who watch that aging is a natural development which provides continuing opportunity for happiness and accomplishment.

"Nearly all recognized authorities agree a healthy old age depends on activity. Giving and receiving help is a neighborly thing to do. The credo of the foundation is neighborliness. We are here as good neighbors."

Low rainfall forecast for next 90 days

By PAUL WOLF

OCTOBER IS expected to bring more rain than usual, but November and December are likely to be dry, according to a Monterey-based observer with the National Weather Service.

"If you assume this three-month forecast is true, it is not good news," said Robert Renard, who has been a volunteer with the service for 30 years. "Even though October will be a good month, we know that October still brings low rainfall compared with November and December."

Average rainfall for October is .83 inches; the other two months average 2.37 and 2.95 inches respectively.

Credibility problem?

But then again, Renard is candid about the fallibility these long-range predictions: "They really do have a credibility problem, especially considering that it is difficult enough to get the daily forecasts right. These have about a 60 percent to two-thirds accuracy rate."

Many factors

Renard said the forecasts are based on many "large-scale factors"—sea-surface temperatures, jet stream positions, past weather patterns and rainfall in other regions.

The 1992-93 rainy season, which broke a string of drought years on the Monterey Peninsula, recorded over 30 inches of rain and a respectable level of runoff.

While Renard said the three months to come will likely be "below average," there are no specific rainfall numbers he would throw out. Nor was Renard about to say whether below average means drought conditions.

As for the entire rainy season, who knows?

Said Renard: "Nobody is going to bet their last dollar on how this year is going to turn out—especially not a meteorologist"

Garden Club adds a touch of class

IT WAS a dark and dismal day Saturday, when the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club held their soiree at Crespi Hall at the Carmel Mission. But their event, The Artist's Eye - the Gardener's Touch, transformed the simple hall.

"The people across the street said it's the first time the building has looked decent," said Rosemary Blackstone, a founding member of Hillsborough's garden club and now a member of the Carmel club.

The entrance was lined with gold painted pots and flowers galore. At the door were two gilded screens adorned with flowers painted by the club's president, Ann Walbert. She was hoping to sell them - then and there. "Art is my love," she said. And added that Diana Fish and Susan Chatham found the wooden screens.

Inside, there were prize winning floral arrangements, with Walbert's deep purple sculpture of a bird of paradise taking first place. But I was most drawn to her gigantic canvas with a Van Gogh like painting of the First Murphy House. The sky was aswirl with sun and gulls and the club created a garden at the foot of the painting, which was planted exactly like they had recently planted the actual house. Climbing rose, beard tongue, fleabane and English Lavender laced the path and a miniature picket fence marked the area.

"It's like being in another world," said Charlotte Davis who beamed as she examined the displays.

Sue Wulfmeyer, founder of a garden club in St. Louis, examined plants and jellies on sale outside. I was thrilled to find homemade apricot jam and wish to thank whomever made it. It's already gone - slurp, slurp!

Cindy Murphy (no relation to the house) is a club member who lives across the street from the bountiful gardens of La Playa Inn. "I'm lucky to live so close," she said, "I copy their gardens." She has no trouble with deer in Carmel proper but said caterpillars chew her foliage incessantly.

I could identify. All summer long I fought this battle of the wildlife. I waited with bated breath as my passion vine sprouted new buds, along with my apple tree and roses. Then, one morning, I noticed that my yard looked unusually green. When I stepped onto the patio I learned why. Every single solitary flower, from pink petunia to purple pansy and fuchsia, had been gobbled up by deer. What hors d'oeuvres they must have been. And the bloodmeal socks I'd left to scare them away had become great toys for the racoons.

The nursery told me there isn't much that grows that deer won't eat. So I'm stuck with whatever green is left.

Anyway...

Pam Smith, the brains behind the show, who co-chaired with Lee von Hasseln, called herself "a half baked flower arranger," to the protests of Walbert. "The show is the story of Carmel and the Big Sur Coast. In the past we've given them in Monterey adobes but we wanted to emphasize Carmel and make that our focus."

So she called Monsignor Declan Murphy a year ago to secure the building. She said he was delighted and the mission's gardener, Bob Kramer, was a joy to work with. "He's fabulous," she said. Sister Jean and Marie Puccinelli also lent helping hands.

Norma Lee, a founder of the Carmel club, proffered a gardening tip: "I'm inclined to think watering." We all laughed. "I've had acres of gardens in Atherton and one thing you have to do it water them."

I was fascinated with one particular arrangement called Stargazer, by Mrs. J.R. Pengilly of the Piedmont Garden Club. It was a swirl of electrical conduit and aluminum tubing that sprouted live lilies from its ends.

Peter Ibel carried out a lovely fall colored arrangement he purchased. He said he loves to look at slides of different gardens.

And Marge Hergert, who had come from Stockton to visit her Carmel daughter and son-in-law, Catherine and Larry Stewart, said, "Everything grows down here. We struggle with the heat and wind." She said it had been 100 degrees there and that's why we were socked in with fog.

CARLIE SHORT flashes a beautiful smile, showing the hand-painted hats decorated by garden club members.

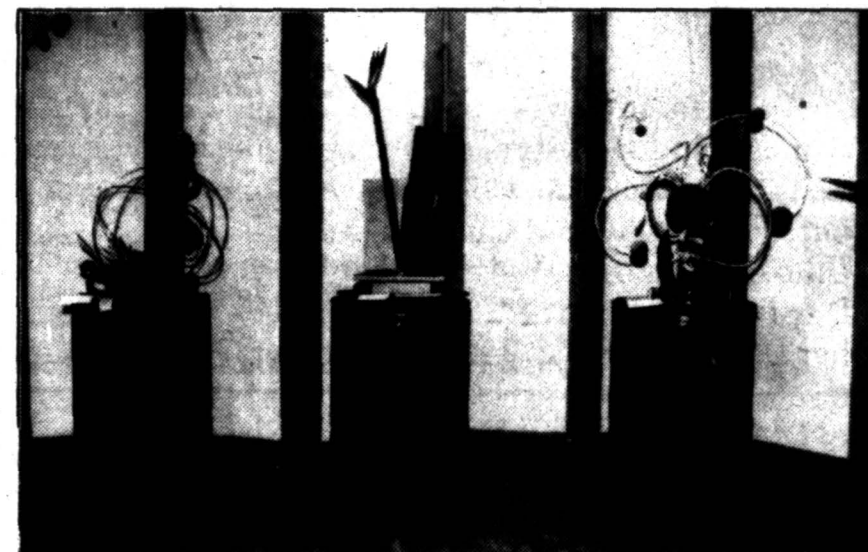

VISITORS NANCY Johnson and Mary De Pooli admired club president Ann Walbert's rendering of The First Murphy House.

VISITORS EXAMINE plants submitted for judging by garden club members.

PAM SMITH and Lee von Hasseln, Carmel-by-the-Sea garden members and co-chairs of the garden show at the Carmel Mission, greet guests at the gilded entrance to Crespi Hall.

AMONG THE futuristic arrangements were Walbert's prize-winning birds of paradise (center).

RED ARROWS played chicken at 400 miles per hour for California International Airshow visitors.

Meanwhile, outside in the bone-chilling mist, some eighth-graders from Junipero Serra School were selling hot coffee and desserts. Alex Salmoun, Chris Duke, Jared Chappin, Nicole Dansby, Mo Raya Maynard, and Brianna Pires wrapped their sweaters around themselves tightly and smiled at their customers.

Bombs away!

I cringed as a Tomcat blazed overhead, trailing the most exquisite ear-shattering sound during the California International Airshow. Tom Cruise's confident smirk came to mind. I was looking up the nostrils of Dick Rutan, famed pilot of the Voyager (you remember, the glider loaded with fuel to the gills that made it around the world in nine days non-stop without refueling). He was glued to the skies and didn't hear me calling his name for quite awhile. "Yesterday (Saturday) they flew better," he said.

Soon kids and adults thronged around him as he signed autographs. And as the likes of Bruce Winge and I oohed and aahed at the ballet overhead, there was a bemused and almost bored look on Rutan's face.

"What have you been up to lately?" I asked. He mentioned he was engaged and his fiancée couldn't come to the show because she was back home in Mojave moving her classroom. Then he said he was between projects.

A hawk rode the thermals, probably smirking at the passing antics of England's Red Arrows. "Ho-hum, what's the flap all about?" he probably thought. Sorry, I'm inclined toward anthropomorphism...

Anyway, Rutan was warming up to me and said his next little project is to develop a new feeder airplane for Federal Express. "I'm looking for capital to do it," he said. "But it seems Bill and Hilary are going after it and there's nothing left for American free enterprise to go after."

He agreed to appear at the show because he supports children's charities and continues lecturing throughout the world.

Each time I meet the man I'm thunderstruck by his creative energy. He explained it with, "I think it would be exciting to fly a 747 with 300 passengers from L.A. to New York. But after you did it once, why do it again?"

Social Spotlight

Meanwhile, the foul British weather cleared and the Royal Air Force carried on. At once, eight of them would gather in diamond formation and then, as if in a cue ball break, shoot off in all directions.

My neck is still smarting...

My favorite scene was when dozens of parachutists dropped from the heavens drifting down on colorful canopies and landed as if they were merely stepping off an elevator.

Back at the telethon tent, Sharon and Caylon Haney, owners of Re-Max Group Salinas, who co-sponsored the chalet with Monterey Peninsula Re-Max, enjoyed the show. "This is such a good thing for the community," Sharon said. "It's the cream of the crop number one airshow."

She said it's their opportunity to give back to their community and that if she's going to contribute hard earned money, she likes it to be to an all-volunteer event.

In fact, hundreds of non-profit organizations profit from the air show, now in its fourteenth year of planning. Yes, you can bet that at this very moment, after the field has been cleared, plans are underway for the next world famous show.

Doris is back!

Want to say hello to Doris Day? And Suzanne Somers, and Desi Arnaz, Jr., and Lonnie Anderson, and Dean Stockwell, Clint Eastwood, and... And help out The Family and Children Services, Boys & Girls Club of Monterey, Peninsula Outreach, and The Doris Day Pet Foundation? This Saturday, Oct. 9, Doris and her best friends will host a celebrity golf, tennis and croquet tournament followed by dinner and dancing to Les Brown and his Band of Renown at Quail Lodge Resort and Golf Club.

And here's a recent flash! There will be a special family spectator offer: $15 for adults and children under 12 free for the afternoon. Call 375-PETS for prices and reservations.

Be there or be square.

BILL METTE, retired teacher from Campbell, has been flying his 1941 Ryan PT22 for 25 years, and enjoys talking with people at the air show.

THE AIR show is one of the few places where thousands of people suffer cricks in their necks simultaneously.

JOHN AND Erika Engelman, president of Soroptomist International of Carmel Bay, joked with Ken Lofink, past president of SCRAMP, at the soroptomist fund-raiser La Gala Seca at Laguna Seca Raceway.

MISS LAGUNA Seca 1993, Annemarie Briggs, liked the feel and look of the 1955 Kurtis Roadster.

chair. "These drawings are the result of 10 (task force) meetings."

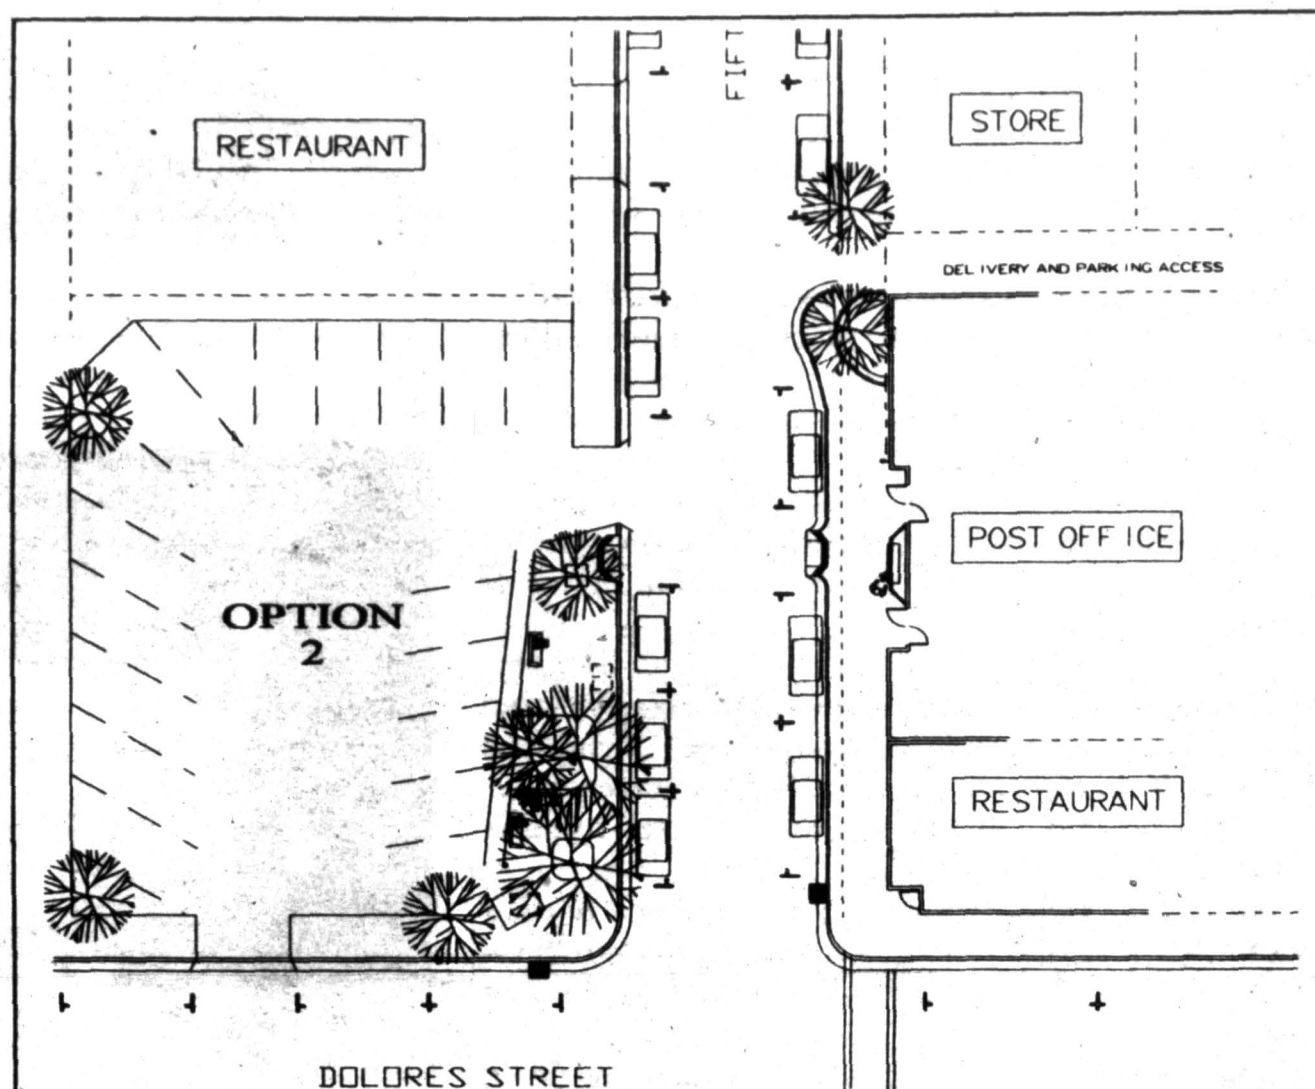

Options 1A and 1B include widening the sidewalk on the post office side of 5th Avenue by seven feet. The first of these two options includes a 22-inch brick wall and a landscaping area separating the street from the sidewalk area. Three parking spots would be lost with either 1A or 1B.

Option 2 is the most modest of all the proposals. For starters, it includes widening the sidewalk just 2.5 feet, with the loss of only one parking space.

All the plans and a "perspective view" of Option 1A will be on display at the post office before the public meeting.

OPTION 2 CALLS for widening the side walk only 2.5 feet, preserving the two of the three parking spaces reduced in Option 1. The EightFoot no-parking area in front of the post office front doors accommodates street-crossing. The estimated cost is $10,000.

Volunteer Fire Department's 'Muster' event Sunday

Discover new vitality with help from Pacific Trim & Tone

Firm, Tone & Reduce a Minimum of 6 Inches Per Session!

Did you know that your skin is your largest eliminative organ? The skin plays a vital role in ridding the body of toxins and impurities. It has been estimated that the skin eliminates more than one pound of waste a day.

With that in mind, Pacific Trim & Tone has developed bodywrapping services that assist in the removal of toxins. The isotonic (sea clay) wrap softens and breaks away hardened fatty tissue. The warmth of the bandages coaxes pores to open, allowing the ingredients to travel and begin to dissolve cellulite. The wrap continues to work in the adipose tissue for 72 hours, attacking toxins and impurities that have been built up over the years.

Combine the wrap with a relaxing workout on the professional toning system at Pacific Trim & Tone, and you should notice inch loss, reconditioned skin and cellulite reduction. Discover the isotonic sea clay wrap/breaks away hardened fatty tissue.

CUSD candidates to tackle all issues in Oct. 13 forum at Middle School budgetary limitations, the Planned Parenthood Action League would provide the information if requested by the public. She said the organization would not endorse a candidate.

So what was the reasoning behind the Planned Parenthood questionnaire?

"We're finding there's a lot of people coming in from other cities who have misrepresented themselves on issues related to sexuality education," White said. "These tend to be the extremist anti-choice groups."

According to White, there are organizations who throw a candidate into the race to have their "extremist agenda" promoted.

"Our interest is to educate those who vote," White concluded.

Arguing that the questions were worded in such a way to garner the desired response, Burch added, "I'm perfectly willing to answer questions on anything, but I will not be confined to a forced yes or no answer, by either the Christian right or by Planned Parenthood. They've heavily slanted these questions to their point of view."

Yee Steck agreed: "They asked some very ambiguous and controversial questions. I think it's important for the community to know these organizations are asking questions of prospective board members."

Burch cited the Oct. 13 school board candidates' forum at Carmel Middle School as an ideal opportunity to discuss these controversial issues and invited representatives from the two organizations to attend.

"The democratic process allows anyone to ask an elected official their position," Burch added. "I support their right to ask any question, particularly where kids are involved."

Kistenmacher said he, too, had received the questionnaires, noting he answered those questions he felt he was capable of answering.

"I've really been taken back by these kinds of things," Kistenmacher said. "I think there are more important issues facing the school district than questions on surveys from Planned Parenthood and the Christian Coalition."

Dice said she found the Christian Coalition questionnaire and cover letter offensive and threatening, particularly because the letterhead indicated the organization is Salinas-based.

"I don't think a political action group based in Salinas has any business in a CUSD election," Dice said. "I'm going to be responsive to questions directed to me from voters in this district, because that's who the board serves."

Henry Bruce knows all that is going on in town

When The Pine Cone started printing its own paper, Bruce went to work at the Monterey Peninsula Herald newspaper, which Griffin founded in 1922.

"No one bothered me at The Herald," said Bruce. "I worked seven hours a day, five days a week and the pay was good — better than average."

Bruce worked at The Herald for 54 years. During that time, the most memorable news event Bruce remembers is the time he and his wife were driving back to Carmel after a visit with a friend in Palo Alto. They stopped to get gasoline at a station in San Jose.

"Some guy said a group of townspeople were breaking down the jail house," said Bruce. "They were after the two guys who murdered a boy, and they were going to take them to a park and lynch them."

Bruce and Georgia followed the crowd to the park. "My wife and I didn't sleep very well that night," said Bruce. "Every time I closed my eyes, I would see those guys hanging from the tree."

Over the years, Bruce has accumulated a wealth of stories and information.

"If we need any information, we wait for Bruce," said Sevier, who is pleased that Bruce is now frequenting the Red Lion at its new location. "He followed me here. I think it's great. There are quite a few customers who have switched over."

Bruce sits on the bar stool next to the wall by the side door. Behind him is a picture of himself with his second wife, Ethna "Twig" Moria, buying the first beer from Bud Allen.

He comes in at 4 p.m. every day, seven days a week. He never drinks more than four beers and usually no less, one every half hour. He's always home at 6:30 p.m.

"I don't think it hurts me," said Bruce. "I think when you get through work you should drop in some place, have a few drinks and give yourself a chance to forget about work."

Bruce is a man of few words, which is why he knows everything that is going on. When anyone asks him a question, he often refers to his small, black leather case with "Bruce's Almanac" printed in gold letters on the front.

Inside is a wealth of clips, business cards, jokes and football and baseball cards indicating the name and place of every team's playing field.

Tucked somewhere toward the back of Bruce's Almanac he keeps an obituary of The Herald's founder, Griffin, who died July 20, 1981.

"He was a very nice person," said Bruce, who decided to retire from the newspaper in 1990 when the printing process was computerized. He had already made the switch over from hot type to cold type over the years, and that was enough.

"I decided I didn't want to learn any more," said Bruce. "I was about ready to retire anyway."

He may have retired from work, but he surely hasn't retired from his daily excursion to the new Red Lion. He's like a clock with few exceptions.

Once, a while back, Sevier said he returned from a vacation only to find out Bruce hadn't been in for a beer in a few days. Sevier immediately drove over to Bruce's house to check-in on him. "He had the flu," said Sevier. "I needed to know he was all right."

Bruce, who will celebrate his 85th birthday on Thursday, Oct. 14, is happy with his life. He said he wouldn't change anything. He gets a free Herald every day and buys the San Francisco Chronicle to keep up with the news.

As for Carmel, Bruce said the city hasn't changed much over the years.

"There are still no house numbers. Just a few more people."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Can middle-aged men take steps to reduce heart attack risk? A research project involved 12,000 men. Half got routine medical care, but the others also were given strong advice and support to stop smoking, lower blood pressure, lose weight and avoid foods that raise blood cholesterol. After 5 years, there wasn't much difference in how the two groups fared. But after 10 years, a distinct pattern evolved. The Journal of the American Medical Association reported that the heart-attack death rate was 24 percent lower for those specially coached to modify their health habits. In this group, 50 percent had stopped smoking, compared with 29 percent in the other group.

The trend by older Americans to keep fit and active has extended to the ski slopes, where it's not uncommon to find men and women in their 60s and 70s making downhill runs. Their numbers have grown to thousands since 1977 when a few individuals formed two organizations for senior skiers — the 70-Plus Ski Club, 104 East Side Drive, Ballston Lake, NY 12019, and the Over the Hill Gang, 13791 East Rice Place, Aurora, CO 80015. Minimum age for the "Gang" is 50. People in their 60s who want to join 70-Plus are told "they have to grow up."

The only acceptable path

RECALLING LAST week's Carmel Pine Cone special report on town character, one might note an interesting irony in the dynamics of preservation politics.

It is the newcomers to Carmel who are often the most ardent about the tough regulations to safeguard character. Strangely, many older, lifelong residents insist that the local history has never been orchestrated, charm never legislated.

Why start now? "Some change is inevitable," they are liable to say. "But Carmel has remained the best place on earth."

It would be frustrating to regard character as something that once evolved, but now must be preserved — like something corked and bottled. Indeed, a stifling brand of self-consciousness can accompany all decision making, much to the annoyance of many no-nonsense old-timers.

With the passing decades, it has been less the old landscape that they seem to miss than a certain lifestyle. But society asks more of us today.

Once we drove giant gas-guzzlers and threw our bottles in the garbage. No one expressed their love for the environment with recycling, wetlands ordinances or "green habits."

Activists — be they for the environment or preserving town character — are easily mocked because they make us feel self-conscious and are all too willing to encroach on our freedom. Nagging as they may seem, their goals are important.

Changed for good

Carmel is no longer a haven for Bohemians or anything particularly radical. The freewheeling George Sterling and Jack London decorated the ocean-side canvass of early Carmel, scrolling out new verses to the "Abalone Song" with great abandon. There would be few places we know of for their likes today.

Actually, the most often quoted words are from the city code: "Carmel-by-the-Sea is hereby determined to be primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential city where business and commerce...are subordinated to its residential character."

Sometimes it may feel we are left with nothing but a noticeable self-consciousness, like some Eden Lost? It would be an uncomfortable notion to consider that the first blow to Carmel's early character was when it became overly aware of its specialness.

Staying the course

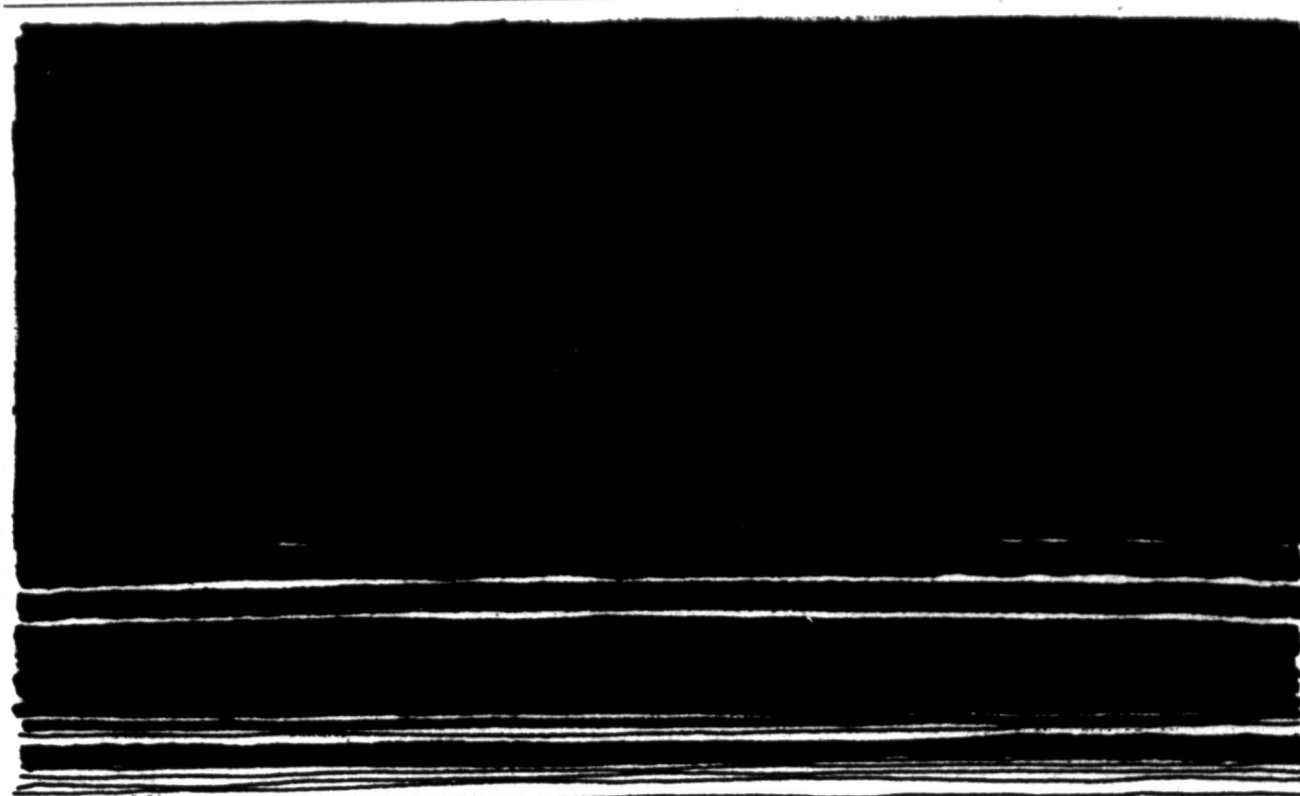

But there is no turning back, and we must now accept ourselves as guardians who must watch their own moves.

The residents of Carmel a half century or more ago were not faced with T-shirt hawkers, "monster homes" and speculator "sharks," as historian Harold Gilliam vividly labels them.

With its growth both in population and reputation, Carmel is neither frontier nor retreat. Obviously, it is not about to redefine itself in revolutionary fashion — unless by some gross assault of commercialism.

Preserving Carmel's ambiance for the future calls for vigilance, shared values and an interest in preservation. Admittedly, many remember two or three generations ago when much of this annoying effort was not needed; character was just something that took care of itself.

But if our forward march requires the dull study of every step, so be it. There is no other acceptable path.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters should not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

Senator, you can be the hero

(Editor's Note: The letter writer forwarded a copy of the following addressed to Sen. Henry Mello. — Ed.)

Dear Sen. Mello:

I write you this note as a lifelong and very loyal democratic voter, also a lifelong member of the Monterey Peninsula community, also as a former elected official, Carmel City Council.

Twelve years ago when I was on the Carmel City Council, we voted in favor of the Hatton Canyon freeway. Five years ago, I became a board member of the Hatton Canyon Coalition. Quite a change of heart.

I mention the above as I believe you may now be ready to look at the bigger and new picture that has emerged.

The growth is not happening as projected, immediate jobs will be created by the improvement of Highway One, the rest of the freeway money will stay in our County of Monterey, and most importantly the great majority of the voters in this area do not want the freeway.

The over 600 people who have given money to the Hatton Canyon Coalition are just a small tip of the iceberg. As you know, the Sierra Club and City of Carmel Park District are all united in the lawsuit. It takes a good politician and public servant to swing with the wishes of the people.

You can be the hero...now is the time...please help.

Thank you.

Curbing T-shirt criminals

Dear Editor:

Carmel is very fortunate to have people like Clayton Anderson to protect the city's image. However, I don't think he went far enough with just the banning of T-shirt shops in Carmel (Pine Cone letters, Sept. 30).

This is a sickness that is spreading out worldwide. Why right here in Carmel, I know several homes that have well over 20, 30, even up to 40 T-shirts stashed in bureau drawers — fathers, mothers, even children and grandparents are wearing these ridiculously popular garments. Carmel Mission went so far as to feature a likeness of the Basilica

Resolving our own water battles

THE CALIFORNIA water wars on the Central Coast are now in the testy mood centered around the groundwater fights in the Salinas Valley.

Careful reading of just the headlines of the past two weeks reveals the serious infighting of the Salinas Valley farm communities and the Monterey County Water Resource Agency. The agency will be minus one dedicated member, who received much of the wrath of the farm community.

It looks now that serious management considerations must be given priority to resolve these fundamental differences between many diverse factions.

Some of us are now looking at the Watermaster system of enforcing water law and rights. This method was developed some 40 years ago mostly for Southern

This method calls for close monitoring for compliance of groundwater allocation, and compromising by settling court cases through a court-appointed Watermaster team. It has stopped the ugly fights over water in those 12 adjudicated ground water basins.

The San Gabriel Valley around Pasadena and east Los Angeles has been well-covered in 1990 by a Workshop of Political Theory & Policy Analysis at Indiana University, funded by the U.S. Geological Survey. This makes fascinating reading for the lay readers wondering how the West was won for cheap California land.

I am expecting the state soon to force the county into a Watermaster-type adjudication. It may be the only sure-fire method of minimizing the water rights fights now rampant and probably as fierce as the Los Angeles fights of the past decades.

But, for the peninsulans here, we should be alert to the potential of resolving our own water, sewage, drainage and water quality battles with our own failed institutions.

It is quite probable that the pending litigation of water rights on the Carmel River by the State Resources Control Board could include the MPWMD area and Carmel River basin within the area boundaries of adjudicated groundwaters within the county.

This could mean some drastic reshuffling of the water supply authorities within the county, including combining some of the water/sewer agencies' functions under Watermasters.

Where water pollution problems persist, as with non-point urban storm water and spills into the ocean sanctuary or other pipelines, that function, too, may precipitate institutional changes.

Remember that Mother Nature's water and drainage patterns and boundaries do not give a damn about usual political boundaries.

The life you save could be your own

THE CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA Chapter of the American Red Cross was granted a charter with the National Red Cross Headquarters on Oct. 28, just days before the city of Carmel was incorporated in 1916.

Although no mention of the Carmel Red Cross was made in historian Harold Gilliam's Creating Carmel: the Enduring Vision, the humanitarian organization has been of such great community interest and support that the chapter continues to actively function.

During World War II, the need for blood was urgent and the chapter recruited local donors.

In 1945, doctors and other health officials realized that blood was vital to national health and in 1948 reentered the program. In 1972, the Monterey County and Carmel Chapters joined in a cooperative agreement with the Community Hospital of Monterey which became known as the Red Cross/Community Hospital Blood Program.

But not to worry — we have folks like Clayton to protect us from further exposure to this looming threat to Carmel's cultural downfall.

I want to go on record as supporting Clayton's plan to outlaw all T-shirt shops in Carmel but only with the caveat that the city council pass a law that makes it unlawful to own or to wear T-shirts within the city limits. This way, we nip the problem in the bud. A suitable fine could be fixed for first-time offenders and something just short of the death penalty for habitual T-shirt criminals.

After all, we must stop this rampant, tasteless criminal activity before it spreads too far.

I'm with you Clayton and, maybe, after we get all the T-shirts out of town we could start looking at those real estate offices along Ocean Avenue — a lot of them have been looking pretty tacky lately. And about some of those books in the library...

Get those flu shots

Dear Editor:

Influenza and pneumonia combined have ranked as the sixth leading cause of death in the United States since 1979. As flu season draws near, the American Lung Association—the Christmas Seal People—advises all high risk individuals to obtain their flu shots now. Early vaccination can strengthen the body's defenses against influenza and pneumonia. Yet each year those individuals who could most benefit from these vaccines fail to get them.

Those at high risk include older adults, especially those over 65 years of age; adults and children who have chronic disorders of the pulmonary or cardiovascular systems; residents of nursing homes or other long-term health care facilities. Health care providers should also be vaccinated to avoid transmitting influenza to high risk persons.

Flu shots have to be taken once a year since the virus strains change annually. The preferred time for flu vaccination is between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15 to allow the body sufficient time to produce antibodies to the virus.

We at the American Lung Association of the Central Coast hope that you will support our urgent message on flu and pneumonia. It is a matter of life and breath.

Petaluma girl's abduction hits home for relatives

searchers that we had to set up this command facility."

The abduction occurred Friday night, Oct. 1. Betty Jane was on the search scene until she fainted Sunday and was driven back by relatives for a quick check-up at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

From her Carmel residence Tuesday: "It was stress. I'm fine. Actually, I'm feeling desperate, but you do what you can. We had (local) TV interviewers here all day Monday. America's Most Wanted (national TV series) planned a show on Polly (Tuesday night). Joe is working with KGO Radio's three-hour special program from Petaluma. She's a marvelous, marvelous child — smart and resourceful — but she's with a criminal. If you don't get past the terrible feelings and keep going, keep hoping, it's no use."

Eugene Reed, a retired electrical engineer, spoke for himself and wife Joan during a telephone interview Tuesday. "It's a thing of terror — an awful blow. This innocent child means so much to all of us. My wife's going out to see if Clint Eastwood will make an appeal. Our thoughts cannot be pronounced in words. Who knows where this man (the kidnaper) is? We were in Petaluma until just this morning, and the whole town's in an uproar. The most unlikely spot in the world, this slow-moving little place."

Critical period expires

Petaluma police noted that most kidnapping victims who are found safe will be located within three days of abduction. Observing professionals at Carmel Police Department agreed. The critical 72-hour period expired at 10:40 Monday night.

Sgt. Mike Kerns was the designated spokesperson for the Petaluma department. He said the knife-carrying kidnaper entered Polly's home while she and two other girls were playing board games at a slumber party. Polly's mother and a younger child were asleep in another room.

"It's strange that he asked the girls which one of them lived in the house," Kerns said during a telephone conversation Tuesday. "When Polly answered, he left the other two tied up and took her. He also asked Polly where the valuables were, but he didn't remove the small amounts of money and jewelry. The friends freed themselves and woke Polly's mother."

And: "We're getting hundreds of leads per day, and we're checking them out. The FBI profilers are here; they'll give us a reading on this guy. All evidence points to a stranger abduction (as opposed to a divorce-related kidnap or runaway). He was a stranger who walked in and grabbed her. There has been nothing to indicate otherwise. I wish I could give you something new and definitive, but there hasn't been that kind of break in the case. We're following up on the tips, one at a time."

PETALUMA POLICE released this composite drawing of the kidnaper who stole 12-year-old Polly Hannah Klaas from her home at knifepoint. Atright is his "possible appearance without the beard and bandana."

Awareness asked

Kerns asked Pine Cone readers to be aware of descriptions. The kidnaper was listed as a white male, 30-40 years old, dark or dark gray hair with full beard, dark clothing, yellow bandana around his head.

Polly: 4' 10" with a thin build and brown eyes, brown curly shoulder-length hair, last seen wearing a short white skirt and pink shirt tied at the waist.

"And," the officer added, "please ask everyone there to be on the lookout for a strange car seen in Polly's neighborhood just before the abduction."

It was a dark gray Honda Civic or Accord with primer paint on the driver's door and left front fender. Anyone seeing such a vehicle should call Petaluma Police Department without delay — (707) 778-4372.

Over the weekend and on Monday, many hundreds of volunteers searched for Polly throughout Petaluma. No sign of her. By noon Tuesday, according to Joe Klaas, Pip Printing had run off "half a million kidnap flyers free of charge and will give us another half million if need be. MCI gave the command center free phone service and fax machines; we just got a request for flyers from Hawaii and will fax the material anywhere in the world. When Polly was born, she was our first grandchild. The horror of the situation can't stop us from working. The media people and volunteers keep coming and coming. They love Polly without knowing her, and we're praying as we search."

Joe explained that his son and Polly's father, Marc Klaas of Sausalito, was divorced from Polly's mother and had visits from Polly every weekend. Polly's mother remarried, it was stated, and Marc was engaged.

"Family members have been ruled out by the FBI and police," Joe said. "There are no enemies of family members who'd do such a thing. At an early point, police indicated that Polly may have been targeted — she's pretty and popular and witty."

Frankly, Sgt. Kerns said, Petaluma police "don't know if the kidnaper has left this immediate area. Logically, you'd think that was the thing to do. But obviously he's not logical. We're staying with the conclusion I mentioned before: Polly was abducted by a stranger."

Command center volunteers said every telephone pole and window in Petaluma has a flyer about Polly attached. Over the weekend, flyers were distributed at Candlestick Park and Oakland Coliseum.

Known globally for his writings on "12-step" recovery methods, Joe Klaas once was a media executive. He's the hearty sort to whom tipsters flock. And so he was able to pick up some information about the kidnaper.

Close to the vest

"He's the kind of guy who hangs out in lower-class bars," Klaas said. "He carried the big knife and got into the house through an unsecured door or window. He played it so close to the vest that nobody knew his name. He stopped downtown and had a chicked dinner before he went over and stole our granddaughter. He wasn't after valuables; the general thought that he was sent by someone else is beginning to arise."

Then: "FBI guys tell me that 98 percent of these (kidnap) victims are found alive within six days. The first 24 hours were a nightmare. We're horribly worried and determined to stick together. The longer it goes, the stronger we have to be."

And: "My gut feeling says he's heading south — simply because, from Mill Valley (in Marin County) north, the search is so organized and intense."

There are more than 50 policemen on the case along with sheriff's reserves and 1,400 personnel with electronic equipment from the Coast Guard Academy near Petaluma. "I know that people in Carmel will be extra-aware, and will help if they can. Prayers for Polly certainly are welcome," Joe said.

Betty Jane Klaas (known to her friends as B.J.) noted that four missing children's organizations are advising the command center and the newly-created Polly Klaas Search Fund Foundation.

Any Great Western Bank branch can take donations and forward them to the Great Western trust account in Petaluma.

"Every family member is playing her or his part," B.J. said in Carmel. "When there's terror, a family needs to gather like that."

"One of the other little girls (at the slumber party) looks something like Polly," Joe said from the command center.

"Maybe that's why he had to ask who lived at that house. One of the other two girls said the stranger threatened to slit their throats."

Carmelite helps FBI draw profile of victim

DEVELOPMENTS ON Wednesday in the Polly Klaas kidnap (see main story) involved a Carmel art gallery executive and offered an inside view of how FBI agents are proceeding.

While Petaluma police reported no new developments, Betty Jane Klaas of Carmel — 12-year-old Polly's paternal grandmother — revealed these points during a telephone interview:

- Elizabeth Klaas, Polly's aunt and the assistant manager of a Carmel art gallery, went to Petaluma Wednesday. "My daughter was asked to help the FBI develop a profile of Polly," Betty Jane said. "They want to know everything about her — how she might react in various situations."

- Carmel writer Joe Klaas, Betty Jane's husband, said from the search command center in Petaluma that FBI agents were "asking family members if they would take lie detector tests. I think they want to see if anyone would refuse. And it's in line with the profile of Polly."

He said a team of two FBI specialists from Washington, D.C., was developing a profile of the kidnaper too. "About Polly," Joe added, "they want to know a thousand details — down to what kind of ice cream she likes. Alan Nichol (Polly's stepfather) was the first to take the lie detector test; my son Marc (her natural father) will take it as well. Our whole family is willing. We who know Polly the best probably don't even realize how much information we contain."

- Through her tears, Betty Jane said actress Winona Ryder volunteered to work at the command center all day Saturday. "I think she grew up in the (Petaluma) area," the Carmel grandmother said. "I woke up (Wednesday) feeling quite positive about Polly's safety. But when all the hoopla dies down, will we have the child back?"

New FOCUS president named

KENT WALL has been elected president of Friends of Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), the school district's primary fund-raising organization.

Wall said having children enrolled in the district "motivates him to pay attention to what's going on."

He has been active in FOCUS for the last three years, attending weekly meetings and helping to organize fund-raising campaigns.

"We're really the main body that funnels donations to the classroom," Wall said.

According to Wall, members of the FOCUS board elected him to office in September.

Wall replaces Barry Kilzer, who served as FOCUS president for two years before stepping down last month.

CHS offense stifled in 10-0 loss; league play will start with powerful Palma

DESPITE AN outstanding defensive effort, the Carmel High Padres came up short on offense and dropped their second game of the season Saturday, Oct. 2 losing to St. Ignatius, 10-0, at Bardarson Field.

Known for its high powered run-and-shoot offense, the Padres couldn't seem to muster any kind of drive last week in being blanked for the second time this season. The defense, on the other hand, allowed two early scores and then held tough for the rest of the game.

Carmel — 2-2 in non-league play — opens Mission Trail Athletic League play at 2 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 9) when it faces perennial powerhouse Palma on the Padres' home field.

The offense and defense will both need to be in high gear if CHS is to remain competitive with the always-tough Chieftains (3-1 overall, 1-0 in MTAL). Palma began its league season last week by routing King City, 30-8.

JVs chalk up first win on season

Following a couple of close losses, the Carmel JVs put one in the win column Saturday, Oct. 2 as they triumphed over North Monterey County, 22-7.

Freshman wideout Roddy Shepner caught two touchdown passes of 30 yards from quarterbacks Ben Armbrust and John Porteous, and Noah Cook's 50-yard run set up and one-yard dive for Porteous to give the Padres their scores. Porteous also completed a pass to Josh Bailey, and Armbrust ran one in for Carmel's two conversions.

Despite a 1-3 record, coach Mike Kelly sees good things ahead for the CHS JVs.

"Right now I'm a little on edge because we let a couple of close games get away from us (Harbor and Monte Vista Christian)," said Kelly. "I don't really care what our record is. As long as our guys are playing hard and learning the game, I feel we've accomplished something. We've got a lot of young players who need to mature, but the wins will come."

Freshmen linebackers Nachi Cardenas and Josh Bailey led the way for the Padres. In addition, Freshmen Tyson Liss (out with an injury), Cook, Armbrust, and Matt Williams have showed enormous potential on both sides of the ball. Sophomores Joe Thomas, Joey Ringer and Porteous also put in excellent efforts day in and day out. Another freshman, Josh Campbell, has done a great job on both the offensive and defensive line. RLS suffers heartbreaking setback

A HEARTBREAK best describes the Stevenson Pirates' 21-20 loss on the road last week to Gonzales in both teams' Mission Trail Athletic League opener.

RLS will try to bounce back from the tough defeat when it meets Emery High in a 2 p.m. non-league game on Saturday (Oct. 9) in Pebble Beach.

Emery (1-2 overall) plays out of the Bay League in the Bay Area.

In last week's game, RLS, after leading 7-0 on a Tom Orradre 2-yard touchdown, saw Gonzales string together three touchdowns to take a 21-7 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

But the Pirates stormed back with two late scores: a 35-yard pass to Josh Bonifas from Orradre and a 15-yard pass from Orradre to Gianni Aliotti with just 1:23 remaining in the game. Though placekicker Leland Felsenthal had been 2-for-2 in PATs, the Pirates, trailing 21-20, elected to go for the win.

Quarterback Tom Orradre completed a pass to Mike Prowell in the end zone for what appeared to a go-ahead two-point conversion. After the Stevenson crowd momentarily cheered with victory, a flag was flown claiming offensive pass interference nullifying the score. With the loss of down on the penalty, the Pirates regrouped and tried for the inside kick, but came up short while the Spartans ran out the clock.

MAKING A leaping grab in last week's game against Gonzales is Robert Louis Stevenson's Sekou Sanyika. Gonzales prevailed in the league opener, 21-20.

Powell picks Pepperdine

R.J. POWELL, Carmel High's senior standout basketball player, will enroll at Pepperdine University in the fall of 1994.

The Malibu-based college lured the 6-foot-1 Powell — the Mission Trail Athletic League's Most Valuable Player last season — over UC Santa Barbara, St. Mary's and University of San Francisco.

200 pounds, Campbell seems to have unlimited potential.

With a young but talented team, the Padre JVs will improve. If their showing against North Monterey County was any indication, they're well on their way.

• Cross-country

After a long preparation period, Carmel High's cross-country teams finally got to take a break from practice and take on some competition.

The Padres, who are fielding two complete boys and girls teams for the first time in years ran in the Mission Trail Athletic League Center meet on Monday, Sept. 27. Veteran runner and defending CCS champion Danielle Wall did what she does best — win. In taking the championship, she covered the course at Toro Park in 22:34.

Team competition began on Thursday, Sept. 30 with a dual meet against York and Alisal. In an extremely impressive showing, the Padre boys won the meet with a score of 26 to Alisal's 29 and a score of 23 to York's 33. Bart Rowley won the race with a time of 17:42, and was followed by Jason Kistenmacher and Andy Cook, who finished third and fourth, respectively.

"I'm very proud of the men's team, for the first time in years they have a win next to their name instead of an incomplete," said Coach John Ables.

The team then traveled to Palo Alto to compete in the Stanford Invitational. In a race that contained 90 of the top runners in the western states, Danielle Wall finished 13th, again showing why she is considered to be one of the top runners in the Central Coast.

• Girls Swimming

If history is going to repeat itself, the Padres' swim team will have to beat Santa Catalina of the final day of the season in order to repeat as league champions. Last year, the Padres lost to Santa Catalina during the regular season, but took the title at the MTAL swimming meet.

The Padres came out on the short end Thursday, Sept. 30 in a meet without their top swimmer, Dora Swearingan. Lauren Johnson was up to her usual winning ways, however, taking the 50-meter freestyle.

Amy Antuzzi led a strong diving team by winning the competition.

• Girls Tennis

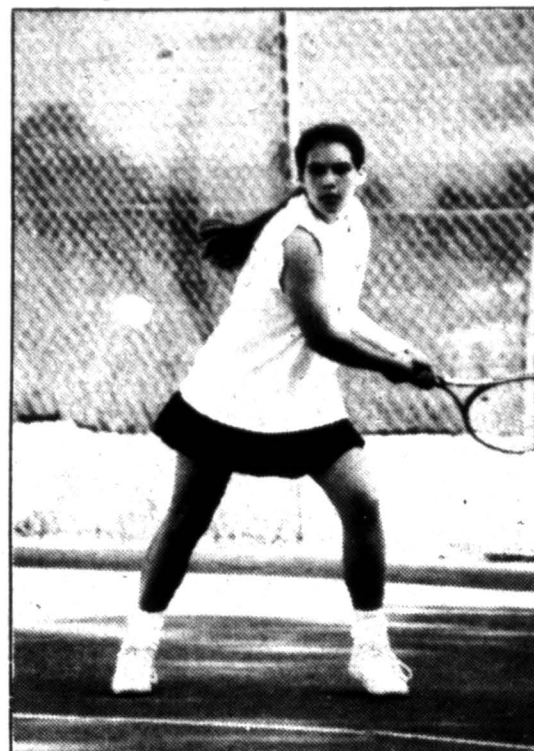

The Padres opened up a full week with a tough loss to Santa Cruz on Mon. Sept. 27. Carmel went down 4-3, but strong performances were handed in by winners Corrina Tuluna and the doubles teams of Navarre Bautista-Lisa Bataglia, and Jessica Moss-Arianne Bautista.

The Padres stayed home on Tues, Sept 28 to battle York, and Carmel won the match, 5-2. Jessica Kattan, Shannon Dougherty, Darlene Tulua and Jessica Moss paced the Padre victory.

• Volleyball

Controversy marred a week that was otherwise fairly productive for the Padres. The day after a loss to powerful King City in which the team played well, losing 3-1, Coach Diane Kelly quit as the Padres head coach. Kelly cited a lack of effort in practice as the reason for stepping down. The team will be coached by junior varsity Coach Roxayne Spruance.

Coach Spruance took the Padres into a match at Santa Catalina where the team played extremely well. Although they lost in four games, the Padres put title contender Catalina to work, losing in the final game 15-13.

Impressionist landscapes and animal sculpture at Trailside gallery

By MOLLY D. WHITEHEAD

TRAILSIDE AMERICANA Galleries will open a show of paintings by Curt Walters and sculpture by Gerald Balciar on Saturday, Oct. 9 in Carmel. Walters, 43, creates impressionistic landscapes of the American Southwest and West coast. The 40 oils on display at Trailside arose from recent trips by the Arizona-based artist to Monterey County, Yosemite and the Grand Canyon.

Walters, who has increased his focus on the California coast, remarks that "each Pacific coastal community has a bright, colorful appeal all its own."

While he appreciates spectacular scenery, Walters is also aware of its fragility. One of his goals in painting is to preserve "impressions of nature future generations may never see." Walters paints outdoors in the "plein-air" style on unusually large canvasses. For Walters as for many plein-air artists, working outdoors fosters a sense of creative freedom not always attainable in the confined space of a studio.

"I'm sometimes able to distance myself from the naturalist phenomenon of impressionism into a reconstruction of color and form outside the moment of consciousness. [This] can sometimes be a frightening experience, but those who have experienced it will tell you it is the ultimate reward."

Opening with the Walters show will be an exhibit of bronze and marble sculpture by Gerald Balciar. The sculptor's primary subject is animals. He first fashions a piece in wax or clay and then makes his own molds. Balciar studies photographs and books of wildlife, as well as using live models. He is a member of several national artistic associations and received the "Prix de West" award for one of his marble works. Balciar teaches at the Scottsdale Artists School and the Art Students League of Denver.

Robinson Jeffers festival to honor Carmel's literary legend Oct. 8

By MOLLY D. WHITEHEAD

A RECEPTION in the lovely Tor House garden will kick off the 1993 Annual Robinson Jeffers Festival on Oct. 8.

The three-day event celebrates in grand style the life and work of the internationally-known Carmel poet.

Grandchildren to speak

Two of his grandchildren, Lindsay Jeffers and Una Sherwood Jeffers, will offer reminiscences of Robinson Jeffers and Tor House, his hand-built stone retreat, during the morning of Oct. 9.

Their discussion will be followed by a dramatic reading of Jeffers' "The Humanist" by actors from Berkeley's Aurora Theatre Company.

This poem allows glimpses of "the genial side of Jeffers as he never elsewhere permitted it to emerge," according to the critic William Everson.

Aurora Company director Kenneth Grantham brings personal experience and a wealth of enthusiasm to the project: "My grandparents homesteaded in Pacific Grove in 1910. I grew up on both the Big Sur and Jeffers, and the chance to let people hear the power of [Jeffers'] language is one I relish."

The performance will feature actor Christianne Hauber, who has appeared with the American Conservatory Theatre of San Francisco.

The celebration will continue with the annual Jeffers Banquet on the evening of Oct. 9. A poetry walk and beach picnic the next morning will conclude the event.

Reservations are required for most activities. For information call 624-1813.

Food festival is feast for the senses

CONGREGATION BETH Israel's sixth annual Jewish Food Festival will offer music, dancing, costumes, wandering storytellers and culinary delights galore on Sunday, Oct. 10 from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. at the synagogue in Carmel Valley.

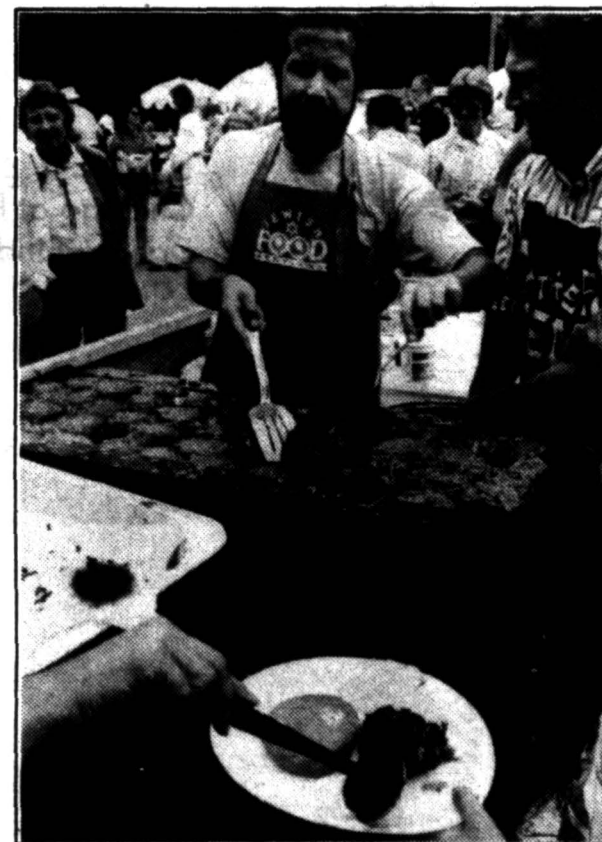

The festival's theme is "Return to Anatevka," the imaginary 19th century Jewish village immortalized in the musical "Fiddler on the Roof."

In keeping with the theme, the festival site will be decorated as if for a village market day, complete with costumed food vendors and pushcart peddlers.

And then there's the food. Kugel, latkes, blintzes, bagels and lox, knishes, cabbage borscht, matzoh ball soup, pastrami sandwiches and more! Contemplating it all is enough to start one's mouth watering.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for teens and seniors. All proceeds benefit the synagogue's programs.

Parking is available at Carmel Middle School, with shuttle buses

Third annual Discovery Day: science fun for kids of all ages

By MOLLY D. WHITEHEAD

THE NAVAL Postgraduate School will host its third annual science Discovery Day on Saturday, Oct. 9.

Kids can experiment with predicting the weather, building contraptions for outer space and operating the controls of a satellite.

Other activities will include "Far Side Science" and "Toying about with Physics."

Participants will be guided in their adventures by scientists and teachers. The goal of the day-long event is to prove to kids that science can be fun.

According to elementary school teacher Eric Bull, one of the organizers of Discovery Day, many kids are turned off by science early in their academic careers.

'Hands-on, minds-on'

By taking a "hands-on, minds-on approach," the planners of Discovery Day hope to counter this trend.

John Sanders, public affairs officer for the NPS, notes that the event "helps to break down negative stereotypes and overcome anxieties that many people have about the sciences."

Discovery Day runs from 9:30 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. on Oct. 9. A registration and information booth will be set up in Spruance Plaza at the Naval Postgraduate School campus. Admission is free.

The Portland String Quartet

Portland String Quartet opens season for Chamber Music Society

THE INTERNATIONALLY acclaimed Portland String Quartet will grace the beginning of the '93-'94 season of the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula on Friday, Oct. 8 at 8 p.m.

The New York Times raved about the group's performance in Alice Tully Hall in New York: "The Portland String Quartet performed brilliantly, arguing the composer's case with passion and precision. One could not have asked for more persuasive, more unified and more yearningly lyrical playing."

Tickets are available the night of the performance at Sunset Center in Carmel. General admission is $15; people under 21 only $5.

Music, dance and theater from old Japan comes to Santa Cruz

TRADITIONAL JAPANESE drums will reverberate in the Performing Arts Theater at the University of California in Santa Cruz on Saturday, Oct. 9 at 8 p.m. The drums will be played by members of the San Jose Taiko group.

A taiko is a traditional instrument with much symbolic significance to the Japanese. In the old days priests used taiko to dispel insects and wicked spirits from rice paddies.

Inspiring courage and fear

Samurai played to inspire courage in themselves and fear in their enemies. Peasants pounded the taiko as they prayed for rain and offered thanks at harvest time.

The San Jose group was formed in 1973 to allow Asian Americans a musical expression of their experiences.

Members of the group have woven multicultural rhythms from Africa and Latin America into the traditional Japanese drumbeats. The musical effects are enhanced by costumes and dance.

Members of the group participate in composition of pieces, choreography, costume design and even hand-crafting of the drums. San Jose Taiko has performed throughout the United States and Canada, as well as in Japan.

PG marks return of monarchs with parade, art show

THE BUTTERFLY parade, one of Pacific Grove's most charming yearly rituals, will take place this Saturday, Oct. 9 at 10 a.m. The town's schoolchildren will adorn themselves with orange and black wings and march down Pine Street to welcome the monarch butterflies that come home to Pacific Grove for the winter. After the parade a community barbeque will ease the hunger pangs of marchers and spectators alike. The cookout in George Washington Park in Pacific Grove will sizzle from 3 to 6 p.m. Admission is $7 for adults, $3.50 for kids. Meanwhile, the Museum of Natural History in Pacific Grove will open its new exhibit, "A Multiplicity of Monarchs." The show by George D. Lepp and Lincoln Brower is a photographic study of the life cycle of the monarch butterfly.

The celebration will continue with a tour of twelve homes, inns and other buildings which represent the town's gabled and turreted 19th-century-style architecture at its best. Costumed guides will conduct visitors through the tour, which begins at 10 a.m. on Sunday, Oct. 10. Tickets are available from the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce at a cost of $10 each.

Jazz Tides: Pairing of Red Holloway, Kitty Margolis promises witty sets

By JOHN DETRO

LET'S TALK about an extraordinary Oct. 17 booking so you can plan ahead if so moved.

At 1 p.m. that Sunday, John Knipe at Chardonnay Winery in Soquel will introduce the talent for "probably our last concert of 1993."

In a little while, John notes, "we'll all be spending too much time indoors" — so the event will happen outside. "Weather permitting."

The area has much beauty. And yet it's the combination of talents that makes the event seem special.

Knipe has paired classic tenorman Red Holloway (Monterey Jazz Festival, dates at Concord Records, famed tours with the late Sonny Stitt) and San Francisco vocalist Kitty Margolis. The rhythm section is no less interesting — superb pianist Dick Hindman, Seward McCain on bass, Scott Morris (drums).

Kitty's certainly no stranger to these shores. Putting her together with Red was a genius stroke. Both swing mightily. And both have a wild sense of humor. (Red vocalizes, too, on party blues whose lyrics have more than one meaning.)

As Dorothy Donegan's set demonstrated during Monterey Jazz Fest 1993, fans really get off on the tradition and technical expertise mixed with some zaniness. Their fun feeds the whole — and that's exactly what should happen when Kitty and Red get warmed up.

The not-for-profit contribution ($24 per) includes a gourmet buffet with wine, beer, soft drinks, sangria. Address: 3467 Chardonnay Rd. Call 1-476-7232 for reservations and additional details.

Another series

Multiple instrumentalist Nick Williams will continue his Carmel jam session at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 7, in the Vista Lobos Park Building (Third between Junipero and Torres).

These get-togethers draw many area players — Bob Blankenship, Dasher (David Kempton), Dennis Murphy, Bob Phillips, on and on — and are styled as family situations.

Refreshments. Modest donation. Reservations: 626-9151. (And tapes of past sessions may be obtained at Do Re Mi Music and Creative Expressions.)

More expansion

As you well know, KJAZ Radio went national via satellite and may be heard locally over KRML Jazz Radio of Carmel. Now KJAZ has created a new division which will serve as a broadcast production and distribution company for its International Jazz Radio Network.

KJAZ General Manager Tim Hodges has been appointed GM of the new entity as well. "We've positioned ourselves to expand availability of KJAZ programming to the widest possible national and international audiences," he says. "Of course we'll continue serving the San Francisco and Monterey Peninsula markets with the same mainstream jazz sound — unchanged for 34 years."

Today, Tim adds, the satellite audience stands at 900,000 listeners in various states and the cable audience at 2,000,000.

KJAZ insiders tell me the station's "very close" to closing a deal with some media folks from St. Petersburg, Russia. If matters proceed as expected, this group will "have the KJAZ franchise for all of Eastern Europe."

Speaking of KRML (1410AM), I'm back on-air there with Sunset Jazz from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. The format features mellow jazz and quite a bit of vintage vinyl.

Queen Ida and Cale too

Over at Aptos Village Park on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 9-10, the Fat Fry Festival will make room for plenty of dancers and whoops and hollers. Hours are 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. both days with the gates opening at 10.

Saturday — Queen Ida and her Bon Ton Zydeco Band, Seldom Scene, Greg Brown, Cache Valley Drifters, Austin Lounge Lizards.

Sunday — Robert Earl Keen, Greg Brown, J.J. Cale, Persuasions, Angela Strehli.

Solid batch of American roots music. Tickets cost $18.50 per day (advance) or $20 per at the gate. Available at Do Re Mi Music in Carmel and Recycled Records of Monterey.

Producers say the fest will happen rain or shine. Available — free shuttle from Cabrillo College to the grounds.

Society strutters

Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society will present a Dixieland Jazz Band Music 'n' Dancing Social from 1:30 to 5:00 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 10 at the Moose Lodge in Del Rey Oaks. Door charges: $3 (members) and $5 (non-members).

As usual, spokespersons Chuck and Lynn Palomino say, trad musicians are invited to sit in during jam sessions and ladies should bring umbrellas to join the Dancing Jubilators.

Short takes

• Cibo's in downtown Monterey offers blues via JB and the Nightshift on Sunday evenings. On Alvarado Street's other side, Viva Video Cafe spotlights the Instant Blues Band on Tuesday nights.

• Monterey Jazz Fest sponsor MCI Communications gave a check for $30,000 to the Jazz Education Fund. Such a check comes annually.

• Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz will have guitarist Bill Frisell's group on Monday night, Oct. 11. With Joey Baron and Kermit Driscoll. Eight o'clock kick; $14 advance (Ticketmaster) or $16 at the door.

• Bach Dancing and Dynamite Society — at the Pete Douglas Beach House in Half Moon Bay — announces the quartet fronted by tenor/flute virtuoso Buddy Collette. Starts at 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 10.

The non-profit Society has been offering programs at that Miramar Beach dwelling since 1966. On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 24 — tenorman Scott Hamilton. Call (415) 726-4143.

Festival of firsts winner a portrait of generational strife

By JAMES P. KINNEY

"WHAT IS a man to make of a theater piece focused almost entirely on the complex emotions of three interrelated women—a grandmother, a mother and a daughter?"

Those words, written after viewing a GroveMont production of Lee Blessing's Eleemosynary in May, 1990, might apply just as well to Keith McGregor's The Far End of the Earth, the 1993 winner of Carmel's Festival of Firsts which had its premier production this past weekend at Sunset Center.

Annie, widowed, fiercely independent and aging spunkily, has carved out a life for herself in a high valley of Washington State's Cascade Mountains. She lives in a cabin surrounded by trees which she is determined to protect against encroachment by powerful lumber interests.

Unexpectedly she is visited by Gail, her only daughter, who works in big city real estate. Gail brings along Jo, Annie's only granddaughter, whom she has rarely seen. The action of the play is taken up with what happens among the three generations in one afternoon.

Gail wants Annie to sell off the timber so she can send Jo to college. Gail harbors a deep resentment against Annie for past wrongs, imagined or real, and fears Annie's potential influence on her granddaughter, who has a teenager's usual frustrations against a mother viewed as stodgy and overly protective. That playwright McGregor is able to identify and dramatize these emotions so well in their complexity and intensity is testimony to his human understanding and dramatic skills. Each of the three reveals vulnerabilities, strengths, longings and fears. It is clear by the end of the action that healing within that unique generational triangle has begun.

The setting has much to do with this sense of healing. Designed and built by Ramie Wikdahl, the porch and clearing in the woods create a reflective, natural place where recovery can begin. Trees, roots and a woodpile infuse a sanity of their own, away from the cluttered distractions of urban living, much like the power of the Arden Wood in Shakespeare's As You Like It. The magic of the outdoors pervades everything here.

There are flaws in the play. It gets a little preachy when condemning societal excesses. Annie, who considers herself a pagan witch, rails against established Christianity and those who refuse to recognize nature's fragility. Words sometimes intrude just as silences are beginning to work their magic. A suggestion of possible physical violence does not ring true.

Nancy Kocher, well known locally for past comedic roles, is crotchety and wise as Annie. One can almost feel her bones grumble as she kneels to retrieve some kindling wood, tough and honest, moving from reluctance to change. In young Jodi Dick's portrayal of Jo we see the all-too-familiar contradiction of defiance and openness to learning which one often sees in the young.

Robin McKee's portrayal of Gail, unfinished and shrill, reflects her being forced to step in on short notice for an actress unable to continue in the role.

Her direction, however, is crisp and intuitively on target. In her Program Notes, she praises McGregor's "courage and willingness to trust" in the process of re-writing and editing in which they collaborated during the weeks leading up to the play's production. McGregor, incidentally, is the first return winner of Carmel's Festival of Firsts Playwriting Contest. His play The Bookworm, with Jeff Hudelson and Sandy Williams in major roles, won the contest in 1984.

'Big Sur': Wildness and fragility revealed

By JODIE LIMON MONTOYA

THE GREAT irony of nature conservation is that publicity is necessary for protection, and yet popularity can threaten fragile ecosystems.

Big Sur is one of the special havens which exists because it is isolated. Paul Henson and Donald J. Usner, authors of The Natural History of Big Sur, published by the University of California Press, invite us beyond the area's magical-mountain-meets-whitecaps scenery to its diverse inner world. While they reveal many of the region's wild mysteries, they are also sensitive to its extremely vulnerable features.

In a crowded room at the Thunderbird Bookstore on Tuesday, Sept. 14, Henson and Usner presented their new book. Both discovered Big Sur in the mid-1980's as natural history students of Professor Ken Norris at the University of California, Santa Cruz. Usner, now a landlocked environmental consultant in New Mexico, was manager of the Big Creek Reserve. Henson is a wildlife biologist with Scientific Resources, Inc. in Portland, Oregon.

Book fills empty niche

The two began their collaboration in 1986 as natural history pioneers. Their work fills an empty niche on the bookshelves. With illustrations by Valerie A.

Kells, it is the first guidebook to a deeper understanding of Big Sur's rich ecological diversity as well as a trail guide to public lands.

To define their book, Henson and Usner first pondered the overwhelming question, "What is Big Sur?" They described the area as "all of the Santa Lucia mountain range between the Carmel River and San Carpoforo Creek, including the coastline," and embarked on six years of exploration of its rugged 2000 square miles.

While they couldn't cover Big Sur fully, they experienced it intimately. Henson recalls encountering a mountain lion dining on a deer carcass and walking on a dead whale's soft body to pace off its length before it was dismantled by the surf. Usner remembers being awakened on his porch by the tremendous exhalations of great whales and watching a blood red moon rise from the smoke of the Rat Creek fire, which destroyed 60,000 acres. "One mile away I could hear it roaring and crackling like a campfire," he said of the burning redwood.

'Natural History': unique isolation is threatened

Inaccessibility offers refuge

Why is Big Sur so unique? First, its inaccessibility offers refuge to many rare creatures. Northern elephant seals haggle over secluded beach plots, while rafts of up to 50 sea otters with pups flirt with the waves. Birds of prey circle steep canyons and perch on jagged cliffs. The authors once observed eight raptor species, including golden eagles and turkey vultures, in a mere 30-minute span.

Like an isolated island, Big Sur conceals endemic (unique to region) species such as the Santa Lucia pine and slender salamander, as well as disjunct (distantly isolated) species such as the Ponderosa pine and sagebrush lizard. Other creatures, like great blue herons which have deserted their traditional wetland habitat for the teeming kelp of Big Sur, may one day evolve into their own separate species.

Big Sur is also the stage where northern and southern plants at their outermost limits converge. Nowhere else in the world will a fog-shrouded redwood cling to the same ravine as a drought-loving yucca.

Compressed plant communities

The Natural History of Big Sur reveals that what first appears to be a random mosaic of colors and textures is in fact an exceptionally compressed pattern of plant communities. Because the elevation changes from sea level to 5,155 feet in only three miles, one can gaze at grassland bursting with purple sky lupine, fragrant coastal scrub, centuries old oak forest, primordial redwood groves, and towering pines guarding the Pacific in a single 1900-foot stretch.

Finally, the mild weather of Big Sur interacting with its gorges and cliffs creates amazing micro-environments. Upland heat mingling with moist canyons spawns exotic oases with rushing waterfalls. Fingers of fog drawn by upland warmth curl around redwoods, shielding them from summer drought. In the back country the seasons change with big leaf maples unveiling their fall colors.

Scars of human activity

About 4,600 years ago the earliest prehistoric gathering tribes in Big Sur lived in a world filled with now extinct grizzlies, wolves, condors, salmon, and thousands of marine mammals. Though the area still retains its untamed character, it is not pristine. It bears the scars of human activity including ranching, logging, development, tourism, and the release of non-native species. In the modern Highway 1 era, three million visitors a year pass through Big Sur.

Henson and Usner struggled with the prospect of attracting yet more people into Big Sur. They resolved this conflict with the belief that the only way to protect is to inform. "In ten years I hope we have advanced enough to say leave a certain area alone," says Usner. "That is the concept I hope people take away from this book."

for the tournament, but the majority were from the ranks of nearly 1200 PBJCA participants in Monterey County.

"He enjoys the competitive level of it," said Chuck Noroian of his nine-year-old son Nicholas's involvement in the PBJCA program. "He has a lot of fun with it."

This is the third year the Noroians have been traveling from Salinas for association events.

"I really enjoy the game because it's relaxing," said nine-year-old Kyle Gentry of Carmel as he carried his clubs to tee off. "You get to go around looking at different golf courses and how beautiful they are."

Gentry has been playing golf for two years and he's serious about it. For his recent ninth birthday, he wanted to play Pebble Beach. He got his wish.

"He went out at 4:30 (p.m.)," said his mother d'Aulan Gentry. "He played 17 and 18 in the dark."

The young golfers aren't the only ones who appreciate the chances they have to play golf on some of the best courses the area has to offer.

"It's a great opportunity," Monterey's Mike Russo said, watching his son, nine-year-old Steven, on his final hole. "He's playing courses I don't even get to play."

Here's a look at the division winners at the Pebble Beach AT&T Junior Golf Championships, Oct 3 at Carmel Valley Ranch Resort for the junior girls (ages 14-15), and middle (12-13), bantam (10-11) and peewee (7-9) boys' and girls' divisions:

Taste Buds

Gianni's scores with 'fresh' approach

GIANNI'S PIZZA has been preparing the best homemade pizza in town for almost 20 years now, along with many other quality Italian meals at competitive prices.

Carl, Ginger and Christopher Costa have owned and operated Gianni's since 1974, using a straightforward approach that is a proven recipe for success.

Perhaps the goodness of Gianni's lies in the homemade pizza dough and sauce, made from scratch every day. A Gianni's pizza crust is rarely discarded because it's always fresh.

Or maybe it's the fresh mozzarella cheese, vegetables and meats that keep bringing Gianni's satisfied customers back for more. The Gianni's Special - loaded with cheese, pepperoni, onions, fresh mushrooms, black olives, bell peppers and Italian sausage - has been a proven favorite among lovers of the combination pizza.

Not everyone likes everything on it, but that is never a problem at Gianni's. Depending on your price range and appetite, you can create any number of combinations by adding to a basic cheese pizza (a 16-inch pizza serves 4-5 for $10.09): Canadian bacon and pineapple, pepperoni, Italian salami, Italian sausage, ground beef, fresh mushrooms, black olives, green bell peppers, onion, anchovies, tomato, liguica, shrimp, or even artichoke hearts.

The vegetarian special will satisfy those who prefer a meatless pizza, with fresh mushrooms, onions, green peppers and black olives.

Ginger herself best summed up Gianni's secret, which is really no secret at all, just common sense.

"What you see is what you get," she said. "Everything is made fresh, from scratch. We buy only the top ingredients and we never use fillers. It's homemade, just like we make at home."

If pizza is not what you had in mind, Gianni's offers a myriad of other choices, all prepared with the same care and attention to detail.

Start with a tossed green salad or antipasto with pesto pasta, green and black olives, red bell peppers, carrots and red onions, marinated in a delicious vinaigrette.

Try a fresh pasta dish with marinara or alfredo sauce and garlic bread, served with your choice of mostoccioli, spaghetti, or spinach fettucine. The fettucine alfredo with clams is a rich, creamy entree sure to satisfy the most discriminating palate. A meat sauce with meatballs or sausage (or both), spinach pesto, and Sicilian style clams round out the pasta selection. A generous portion of traditional homemade lasagna is another tempting possibility.

Saunter up to the full cocktail bar and order a beer, wine cooler, glass of wine, soft drink, espresso or cappuccino to go with your meal.

For lunch, try a hot meatball or Italian sausage sandwich with mozzarella cheese and rich tomato sauce. Cold deli-style sandwiches are also available, made with ham, salami, roast beef, cheese, and all the fixins', or just vegetables, if you prefer.

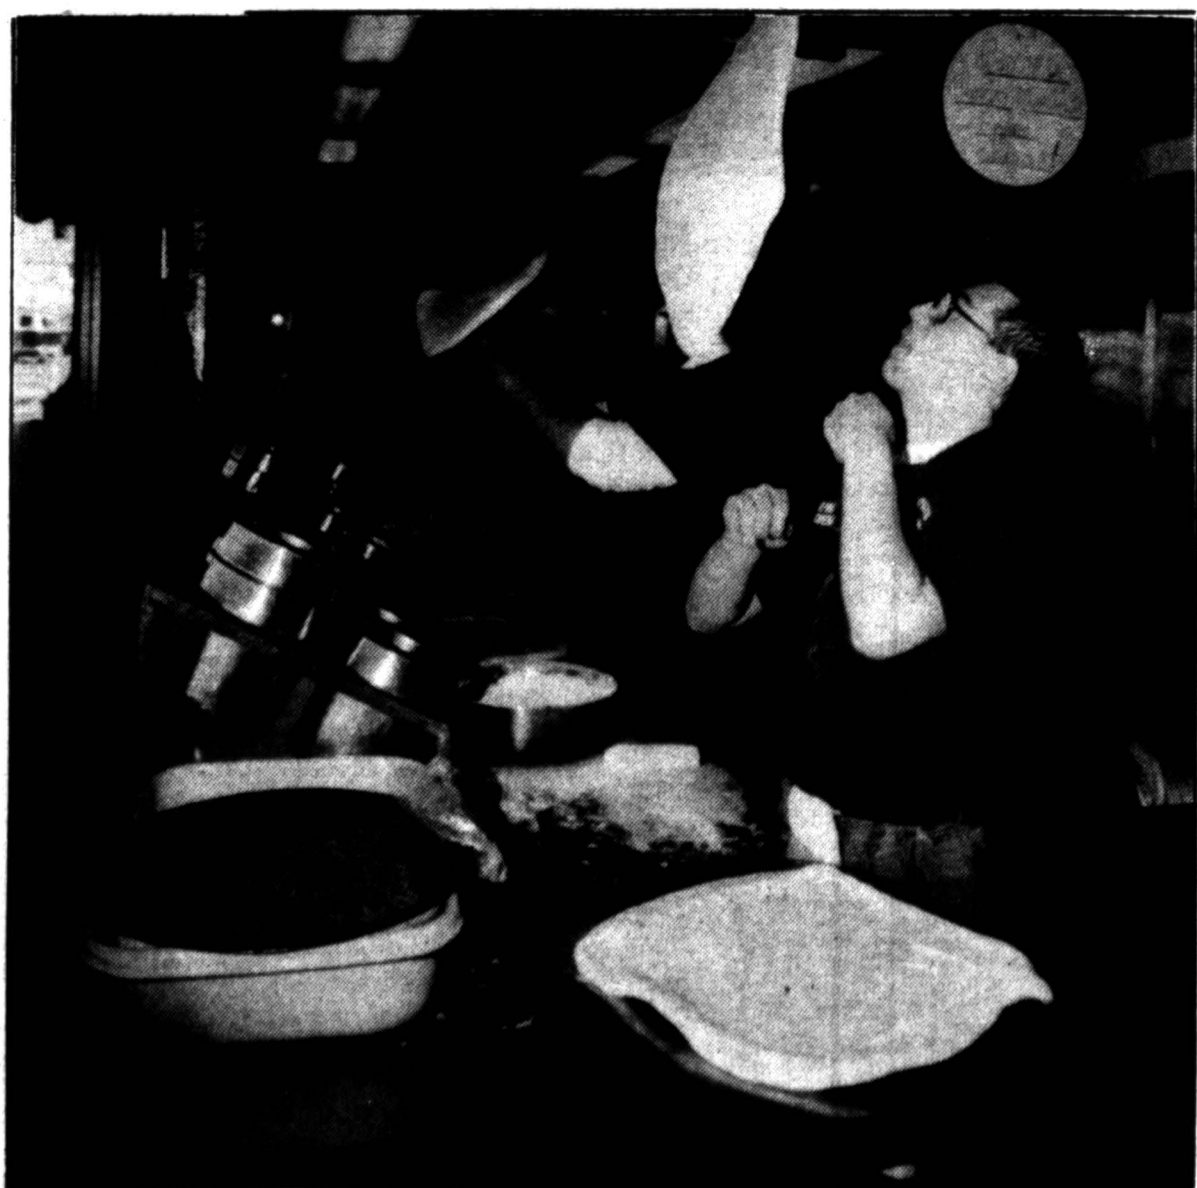

No meal is complete without dessert. If you have room, try a slice of cheesecake, German chocolate or chocolate fudge cake. The gelatos are superior, particularly "chocolate decadence" and mocha almond fudge.

If you haven't already been to Gianni's Pizza, it's time to go. Gianni's authentic Italian atmosphere is informal and family-oriented. Its convenient location in New Monterey makes it a great place to include in your night on the town.

A large banquet room (seats 75) is available for large groups and all special occasions. Call for reservations.

Gianni's is located at 725 Lighthouse Avenue. Restaurant hours are 4 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 11 a.m. to midnight on Friday and Saturday; and 11 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Sunday. To place an order to go (a popular option) call 649-1500.

Spoon-fed pathos — perhaps, but 'Joy Luck' moves

■ Wayne Wang's treatment of Amy Tan's classic is uneven, but film claims attention.

By CRAIG ARNOTT

THE JOY Luck Club is the sort of film that is full of right intentions.

Based on Amy Tan's bestselling novel and her own screenplay, it deftly weaves together the poignant stories of four Chinese-American women and their daughters, but in a way that is, arguably, more maudlin than sincere.

Quietly grieving over the death of her mother, June (Ming Na-Wen) is invited to join the weekly mahjong group started by her mother and three "Aunties." Each Auntie has a unique but similarly devastating story.

Lindo (Tsai Chin) was unwillingly groomed for marriage from the age of four. Ying Ying (France Nuyen) witnessed her storybook romance crumble at the hands of her philandering husband. And then there is An Mei (Lisa Lu), haunted by the unbearably painful sacrifices of her own mother.

Each of these women has, to some degree, placed a burden upon her Americanized daughter.

The film evolves into a close examination of how

THE MOTHER-daughter relationship in the context of colliding cultures is the subject of The Joy Luck Club.

Director: Wayne Wang

these different mother-daughter units have to reconcile their many conflicting emotions in order to reach some kind of manageable harmony.

At best, director Wayne Wang, a name associated with Chan is Missing (1981) and Eat A Bowl of Tea (1989), has the right blend of assurance and sensitivity to travel from one woman's story to the next. He bridges eras and continents seamlessly, while displaying a gift for evocative lighting and staging.

The heavy hand

But for those who cannot readily appreciate the mothers' woeful stories, Wang serves spoon-fed pathos. Every climactic moment is heightened by gushing violin arrangements over the soundtrack, and extended closeups make every character's expression a little too obvious.

At worst, Wang's is manipulative direction, always gunning for the most extreme audience response and not always allowing the story to speak for itself.

Yet the performances, from a cast of unknown actors, are appealingly pure and varied. As the headstrong Lindo, Tsai Chin is enigmatic, and Lauren Tom is convincingly frenzied as Ying Ying's troubled daughter Lena.

Ambitious work

The Joy Luck Club is not just a breathing document about the strain of mother-daughter relationships. It is a study of the discrepancies between Chinese and American cultures and the generation gap.

It is unfortunate that the filmmakers felt more of a need to overwhelm than to educate. Nevertheless, a film of this scope and ambition is long overdue and deserves to be seen by as wide an audience as possible.

MONTEREY PENINSULA PROPERTIES GUIDE

REAL ESTATE Viewpoint

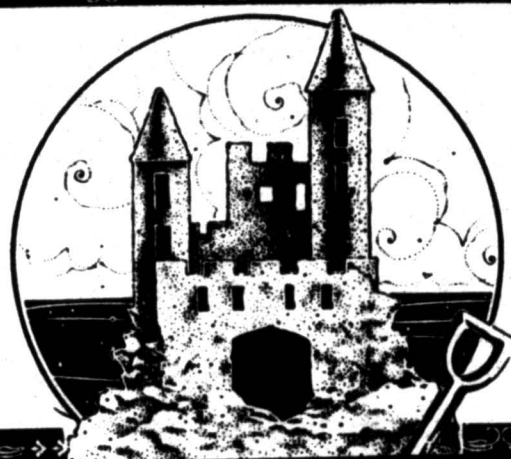

by John Saar, Broker

Do You Have More Room Than You Need?

Your youngest child has just left the nest, and you're left feeling that the old house is just too big. One option is selling it and moving to something smaller, more manageable and less expensive.

Before you make this type of move, you should consult two important professionals — your Realtor and your tax planner. A good Realtor will be able to tell you what your current home is worth and what your options are looking for a new one. However, a move to a less expensive home can have important tax consequences, depending on your age, employment situation, and the equity in your present home. This is where your tax expert enters the picture. Buying down can have important advantages, like lowering your property taxes, simplifying property maintenance, and generating cash you can put into income producing investments.

Call me, John Saar, Broker Assoc., of RE/MAX Mtry. Pen., 624-6963.
